Phone Battle Begun

Citizens Attack
First Colony
On Services

By Howard Swindle

The people who live on the flat, sandy and isolated farmland near Pungo, Back Bay and Creeds in southern Virginia Beach are, for the most part, slow to anger. As one lifetime resident put it, "We're mostly just homefolks and old-timers."

The lifestyle is a world away from the elbow-to-elbow hustle of the resort area to the north. The farmers accept things on a slower standard. But, they can't accept the telephone service they've been getting. Or the recently increased rates.

The festering controversy between the independent First Colony Telephone Co. and its subscribers in rural areas of southern Virginia Beach becomes more heated with every billing date and service call.

Though the climax will probably be reached in Richmond in the chambers of the State Corporations Commission (SCC), some of the groundwork was laid last week when nearly 300 residents of the area met in the auditorium of Creeds School to air their grievances about telephone service.

The meeting was called by the Back Bay Civic League.

Tract Hearing Tuesday

The Terry Corporation is expected to unveil its plans for a large housing tract and shopping center complex on Princess Anne Road Tuesday when it appears before the Planning Commission with change of zoning requests.

The application calls for zoning changes from residence suburban commercial districts between Princess Anne and Holland Roads to a planned unit development (PUD). The proposed development would include about 600 acres.

The corporation estimates that the project, dubbed "Snow Flake" in its planning stages, will take about five years to complete and cost about $150 million.

The PUD includes a shopping center billed as one of the largest in Virginia and a combination of townhouses, apartments and single family units.

But one problem that can be anticipated by Terry is schools. Although the School Board cannot give any estimates on the number of children the project will generate, it is sure to present a crisis to the burgeoning educational system.

Other items the commission will consider include:

Change of zoning and use permit applications by Philip Klompas to construct 12 motel efficiency units on Atlantic Avenue near 7th Street.

Dr. T. Ross Kaskas to construct a new medical building on (continued on page 2)

The point of controversy

An organization formed so hurriedly that it hadn't established fund-raising machinery. Three hats were passed at the end of the meeting to get $15 so the group could rent the school February 10 for its next meeting. In five minutes, enough money was collected for four meetings.

Surprisingly enough, there were no representatives of the First Colony Telephone Co. present at the meeting to tell company's side of the story.

Though complaints of poor service have been voiced for several months, ago when the company received permission from the SCC to raise its rates.

Some subscribers, who had been paying $7.15 a month for a four-party line (the only kind of service available in certain areas), are now paying $12.35 for the same service. One grocer who has a four-party business phone saw his rates soar from $15.60 a month to $27.30—an increase of $11.70 or 75 per cent.

Telephone company officials claim the rural nature of the Back Bay area is responsible for many of their problems and say they will be corrected soon.

The service and rates don't sound reasonable to Delegate Richard B. Guy and Councilmen J. Curtis Payne and Floyd E. Waterfield, all of whom were on hand to listen to the complaints.

Joe Canada, a Virginia Beach attorney, also was on hand at the request of several Back Bay area residents. Payne and Waterfield, who represent the area on the city council, told the crowd they foresaw legal action on the horizon.

"I'm sick and tired of this," said back up on this," Payne said, the large and often late crowd.

The stories related by residents of the Back Bay area left Del. Guy and the two councilmen shaking their heads.

There was the old man who crawled across the highway on his hands and feet after suffering a stroke to get to a telephone to call for help. He had been unable to afford a telephone on his social security income after rates were increased.

A young mother said she had no telephone service while her seven-year-old son, the victim of a pedestrian-auto accident, was in the hospital. "If the hospital had tried to reach me, they couldn't because my phone was out of order," she said.

Frequent calls to the phone company's service section were to no avail, and she usually got only a recording, she said. "There wasn't any emergency service," she said.

A retired Navy captain complained about what he called "outrageous rates for a telephone that doesn't work half the time."

A recent Virginia Beach Sun survey uncovered other rate subscribers of the First Colony Telephone Co.

A small grocery store and service station on the Back Bay Road, near his phone rates climb 75 per cent at his business. He's now paying $27.30 a month for telephone service. Two months ago, he was paying $15.60.

An apparent bookkeeping error at the phone company recently resulted in loss of his phone for a week. "I got it back when I took my cancelled check to them," he told The Sun. Wilson, who has had a phone since opening his business in December, 1962, said the company at first wanted to charge him another $5 to refund his phone even though the error was theirs. He did, however, get his phone reinstated without the $5 fee, he said.

Reevaluation of Issue Called for by Council

By James Turner

The City Council and School Board, after a closed meeting, have asked School Supt. E. E. Brickell to review and par down plans for three elementary schools, with an eye to presenting them again in a bond referendum.

The decision came after the two groups met Tuesday night to discuss the recent defeat of the $18.4 million school bond issue referendum.

"But the issue will not be decided until Mr. Brickell and his staff review the plans to determine what can be removed from the plans," said one councilman.

"And when we say cutting down we don't mean removing anything that would hamper the academic function of the school system," he said.

One group of items that would be definitely cut, though, will be the swimming pools. The issue's recent defeat has been attributed by many to the inclusion of the pools.

"When he gets those figures, he'll be coming back to us so we can discuss possible sources of revenue," said the councilman.

Sources for monies that might be considered include general obligation bonds, but it's doubtful that the city's charter will be changed to fund the entire issue, he said.

The charter now allows the city to sell $2 million general obligation bonds and $4 million worth of sewer and water bonds.

If the charter is changed the funds would be used to make small purchases such as land for school sites, the councilman said.

"But it wouldn't be done to circumvent the public's right" to determine where the money will be spent, he said.

The parred down issue will cost between $11.5 and $12 (Continued on page 8)

Sign Ordinance Deferred After Special Session

After two hours of debate, the Planning Commission again deferred action on a proposed signboard ordinance for 60 days, this time to study and incorporate ordinances proposed by business interests into the original.

The commission's decision came after hearing arguments supporting adoption of the ordinance, which would strictly limit placement, size and use of billboards, and opposing arguments calling for "regulation but not elimination" of signboards.

The commission had previously deferred action on the ordinance in December, for 90 days, when it was expected to be heard.

But during the interim, both parties to the ordinance, the signboard industry and citizens concerned with beautification and "visual pollution," began mustering support.

One faction arranged to pay high school students for signatures gained on a petition supporting the billboard industry's position.

At Tuesday's meeting, there were signs scattered throughout the standing room only crowd which said "Virginia Beach needs Advertising," "Advertising is Essential," "Oil companies need signs" and several others.

Those who held the signs identified themselves only as residents of Seatack and would not divulge any other information concerning their interest in the issue.

Other literature, aside from copies of the proposed ordinance, circulating in the crowd included a six-page series of questions concerning "motivation" of certain city officials.

The list of questions, which carried no letterhead and did not bear the signature of the author, was called "slanderous" by a citizen who read the list.

Ultimately, it was Robert M. Stanton, chairman of the committee for Visual Pollution Control, who expressed an opinion for the majority of the public in attendance.

Stanton said the reason he was appearing was due to "an environmental crisis that is occurring in this country that has focused our attention on the world in which we live."

That attention, he said, has caused citizens to realize what is happening and react to an issue. The reaction in this case was an ordinance regulating the use of signboards.

The ordinance, if enacted, would allow for relief of the visual pollution our streets, highways, expressways and interstates, Stanton said.

"I contend that the only business that will be affected by (Continued on page 9)

Crime Rise Matched By Arrest Numbers

By Les Lehigh

Figures compiled by the Virginia Beach Police Department show the resort city experienced a mixed trend of increase and decrease in criminal activities during 1970, with the most notable increase occurring in violations of narcotic and drug control laws.

The report, which includes a study of virtually every possible criminal violation of the State and City Codes, when compared to the national "Uniform Crime Report," indicates a similar trend also exists in other Tidewater cities.

The mixed trend was arrived at in comparing the city's 1970 statistics with those reported during 1969.

Of prime concern in the report are those offenses involving what are classified as major crimes including murder and non-negligent manslaughter, forcible rape, robbery, malicious assault, burglary, grand larceny (involving thefts representing a loss totalling over $100), and auto theft.

The most significant increase in major crimes against another person were noted in those often referred to as "crimes of passion," murder and non-negligent manslaughter. Last year there were 11 such offenses, while only 4 were recorded during 1969.

In the crime of forcible rape, 24 incidents were recorded in both 1970 and 1969.

This was not true however, in robbery offenses, which showed a decrease. A total of 25 armed robberies recorded in 1970 as compared to 31 such offenses in 1969, with a similar decrease being noted in strong armed robberies, committed under threat of harm through the use of physical force, with 22 such offenses being committed in 1970 as compared to a total of 30 recorded in 1969.

Area Tempers Shorten As Apportionment Drags

The tempers of legislators are beginning to reflect the complexities of the problems involved in reapportioning the state legislature. After deliberating the problems for four weeks, no real solutions have been reached and arguments continue with less statesmanship being shown at each session.

Before a meeting of the Senate Privileges and Election committee on Wednesday, Senator Edward Caton of Virginia Beach took issue with Norfolk's Senator Henry Howell. Howell has proposed the establishment of a floater district include the Kempsville area as part of Norfolk in order to give Norfolk three senators. Another Norfolk Senator, Edward Breden, also disagrees with Howell and prefers the establishment of single-member districts for the city of Norfolk.

Caton, addressing the committee, said that all the rhetoric that has been used before the committee indicates that Virginia Beach will be badly butchered to the detriment of the city. But, Caton said he would favor the establishment of single-member districts in both cities and urged a plan that would combine part of Virginia Beach with a part of Norfolk to create a single-member district, with a Senator elected from that area.

The House Privileges and Elections Committee appears headed on a different and possibly controversial course. The committee continues to reject a redistricting proposal that would do away with the floater district in Virginia Beach and Norfolk. The committee appears inclined to keep city and county lines intact as it reapportions the state. With the population of the two cities this would be a violation of the one-man, one-vote doctrine and could lead to a court test of final reapportionment.

In Virginia Beach, Owen Pickett, chairman of the Democratic Committee said that speaking as an individual he (Continued on page 5)

Increasing False Alarms Studied

A study is underway to determine what steps should be taken to improve the "Silent Alarm System" presently used as one method of providing police protection to business firms in Virginia Beach.

Of concern under the system's present method of operation is a continual increase in the number of false alarms which occur when the system is activated, and police are dispatched to the business firm, but no emergency exists. False alarms reached such a level of frequency several months ago that City Council approved an ordinance assessing business firm owners a monthly $5 fee, for each false alarm relayed by police during that month. This action was taken in hopes that business firm owners might, through the cooperation of other agencies involved in the installation of the systems, take steps to curtail the frequency of false alarms.

The fundamental operation of the system involves the placing of an alarm unit inside a business firm which can be activated by employees in the event of incidents, such as robberies, which would require the assistance of police during normal business hours. The system also operates on the principal of automatic activation in the (Continued on page 5)

Two Dead, Two Critical After Wreck

Last Performances

The Virginia Beach Little Theatre will present the comedy "Invitation to a March" for the last times Friday and Saturday night at the Bay Harbour Club. A shrimp 'n' beer buffet will be served until 8 p.m., followed by the play at 8:30. Bill Britton is the director.

Portrait To School

A portrait of Miss Louise Luxford, former director of personnel for the Virginia Beach School System, will be presented to Luxford Elementary School at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The school was named for Miss Luxford when it opened in 1961. Miss Luxford was associated with the Virginia Beach Schools for 44 years. She began her teaching career in the small Charity Elementary School which was located near Pungo. She taught for eight years, served as a principal for one year, was an elementary supervisor for 24 years, and the Director of Personnel for 11 years.

The oil portrait of Miss Luxford will be presented to the school as a memorial to this dedicated Virginia Beach educator.

Young Pianist Charms

by ALICE DUBOIS

Musical people at Virginia Beach who have longed to hear concerts in Vienna, grand opera in Milan and great artists in London, Rome or New York had the great privilege of hearing a young Russian pianist, Grigory Sokoloff at Plaza Junior High School, Sunday, January 31. His performance brought them to their feet with shouts of "bravo" and a standing ovation for his artistry.

It was a one-in-a-lifetime experience and the Virginia Beach Friends of Music in this presentation brought an artistic vitality and worth to the community that was outstanding. It was so tangible and real that the city of Virginia Beach should benefit for years from a measurable stride and gain in the arts. The city wants and needs this constant and the majesty of this young man's performance gave a cultural distinction to the city of Virginia Beach found only in larger cities.

Grigory Sokoloff, who is an only child, has been trained from the age of six as a pianist. He entered the Special Music School affiliated with the Leningrad Conservatory and at 16 won the coveted Tschalkowsky Competition which eight years earlier, Van Cliburn had won. Sokoloff is the youngest pianist ever to win this gold medal. He has performed throughout Russia, Italy, Portugal and Finland. He will tour the large cities of the United States before returning to his homeland. Through his interpreter it was learned that he practices six hours daily and his regret is that he has no time to see America.

There is no posturing at the piano for this serious young man. The keyboard pulsates under the dip, plunge and soaring of his fingers and a radiance of melody and beauty engulfs the audience. His playing is rhythmic and with a power and drama that grips the listener who has heard music but never felt it. The solemnity of the audience as he played and the silent moment before the thunderous applause is far more of a critique than a reviewer could give.

His program ranged from the composers Bach, Chopin, Ravel to two Russian composers, Scriabin and Arapov.

The compositions of Chopin were filled with the dramatic turbulence and passion of his works. His Polonaise in A Flat Major, Opus 53 was a musical march of brilliance.

Perhaps it was in the two works of the Russian composers, Scriabin and Arapov that the full power and dexterity of his hands penetrated the richness of the music.

His two encores by Rachmaninoff were the B Flat Major Prelude, Opus 23 and G Major Prelude Opus 32.

Grigory Sokoloff gave not so much an interpretation of the composer's music but relived it for his audience. It was a truly great occasion and the authority of this young man was a fulfillment of musical joy. It was a shining hour in the history of the Virginia Beach Friends of Music.

BSA Adult Work Cited

The Tidewater Council, Boy Scouts of America, have honored several Virginia Beach residents for their contributions to the advancement of the Boy Scout movement.

Silver Beaver awards were presented to James H. Peery, and Walter A. Schmidt. The Silver Beaver award is the highest award that can be presented by a local council.

The Silver Fawn, a newly established National Award for Lady Scouters was presented to Mrs. Audrey P. Beasley of Virginia Beach (PAVAB District); and Mrs. Helen B. Crowley of Virginia Beach (Chesapeake District). Both ladies were cited for their efforts as leaders, trainers, and organizers of new Packs and Dens.

Awards were also presented to three officials of the PAVAB District for their accomplishments. Peery, District Commissioner, was honored for surpassing his established membership goal by 1.5%. Ray S. Mose, District Commissioner, received the Roundup Honor District Award. Ray S. Mose, District Commissioner, was honored for having achieved 46.8% National Standards Units.

Vibrations To Be Discussed

Miss Wade In Ensemble

Miss Marsha Wade of Virginia Beach is touring northern Virginia cities today and tomorrow performing with the East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble.

Miss Wade, daughter of the John E. Wades of White Oak Drive, is an obolist with the Ensemble which recently performed at the national conference of the College Band Directors National Association, held in Knoxville, Tenn.

The two-day tour includes scheduled performances of six concerts in Woodbridge, Alexandria, Fairfax and Falls Church.

Selections by Bach, Prokofiev, Grainger, Chance, Walton, Leist, Leyden, and Hummel will be included in the concert program.

The Symphonic Wind Ensemble is a new group, formed last year. Its members are advanced upperclassmen among ECU student instrumentalists who were chosen on the basis of auditions.

Award Again Delayed

The announcement of winners of the 1970 All-America Cities competition has been delayed until March 4, a spokeswoman for Look magazine said Tuesday, "so the city will have to keep playing the waiting game."

"The issue date announcing the winners is scheduled for March 23," said Miss Arlene Epifanio, "but it will come out on the newstands March 8."

She said she didn't know if the city had been visited yet by the magazine team and judges of the National League, but said that the secrecy is part of the whole routine.

The city isn't warned at all of the impending visit and often city officials aren't told even after their departure, she said, unless the people interviewed discuss the visit.

"In fact, I don't really know where they've been and where they still have to go," Miss Epifanio said. "But they (competing cities) should all be covered very shortly."

Virginia Beach is one of 22 municipalities throughout the United States that was named a finalist in the competition, based on improvements in "community living brought about by citizen action."

The city's application for the award listed the Seaside cleanup program, the seymour Hospitality House on Arlic Avenue and the city's rapid economic development as major points for consideration.

Virginia Beach is the only Virginia city that was accepted as a finalist, although about 100 other Virginia communities filed for consideration.

Officials consider the award valuable, but not in a tangible sense.

They point to the national publicity that is gained through the award as well as additional consideration it provides when businessmen consider the city or plant relocation purposes or industrial development.

The city also has the opportunity to present its Seaside cleanup program, the seymour Hospitality House on Arlic Avenue and the city's rapid economic development as major points for consideration.

Beach Schools Receive Funds

The Virginia Beach School Board has been notified that the Virginia Beach System has allocated $61,834.00 in Title II funds for the 1970-1971 school year.

This allocation of federal funds is to be used for the acquisition of school library resources and other printed or published materials for the use of students and teachers in the school division.

Howell's Campaign

State Senator Henry Howell of Norfolk has started his campaign for re-election in Virginia Beach. Howell has sent letters to a number of residents of the Kempsville area regarding "plans being discussed for designating the election districts for the four Senators who will represent Norfolk and Virginia Beach for the next ten years."

Howell went on to explain in his letter that he is recommending a Two-District Plan rather than a four district plan which would divide Virginia Beach and Norfolk into Single-member districts. "I intend to run for the state senate this year and I would like the privilege of running in a three senator district that includes Norfolk and Kempsville."

The letter went on to say that "The alternative is the two district plan which would divide Virginia Beach and Norfolk into four separate districts, each having one senator. I think this would dilute our strength."

The letter closed with an invitation to those who would support the floater district to write to him in Richmond voicing their support.

There is an obvious reason that Howell would prefer the floater district. Under the single-member district proposal, Howell would be in competition with the other Norfolk Senators Peter Babalis and Edward Broaden, Jr. since all three live in the same general area.

Many Families Call Kings Grant Home

by F. N. HOWE

A recent statistical analysis, made as the result of a door-to-door survey, reveals some interesting facts about Kings Grant (the U. S. Government says we may now drop the apostrophe). The analysis being in three large volumes of closely-typed figures, we thought our readers would like to see a brief over-view of its contents before diving into it themselves.

We discovered, first of all, that there are 917 families living in Kings Grant. Because of the inadequacy of the report we found that most of the interesting information had to be deduced by us from that. The report itself deals more in miles of sewer lines, acres of driveways, etc.

So, falling back upon some well-known formulas used by the Census Bureau, Sears Roebuck and the I.R.S., we came up with some very interesting, if unimpressive, facts.

There are 917 homes, yards, driveways, mailboxes, chimneys and woodpiles. Every other home has two cars, but every third home has three, or 1,683 cars or reasonable facsimiles thereof. Every single garage is full of junk. One half of every double garage is full of junk. This means that there is at least one car standing on every driveway most of the time, which accounts for an equal number of service stations surrounding Kings Grant on all sides, some being barely visible under water.

The Census Bureau credits every home with 2 1/2 children. They haven't been to Kings Grant. Every home has 7 1/2 kids for a total of 6,475.5. Every kid has 1 1/2 bikes--one half of a regular plus one banana--call it 1,031.25. Take off 1,500 for the toddlers who don't have a bike yet--881.25 bikes.

The Census Bureau has no figures for dogs and cats, so we had to consult the Post Office Department, which readily came up with an exact dog count and an approximate cat count--27,507 dogs and about 12,000 cats. At least one-fourth of all the dogs are running through our yards, and any given time, which means UTC (up to our clavicles) in dogs.

The power lawnmower count, strangely enough, was just 1.5 less than 917 x 1.5, and this is accounted for by an ancient

City Missing Out on Sewer Funds

The City of Virginia Beach hasn't applied for and not received federal assistance for sewer projects in the last 27 years, a state Water Control Board official told City Council.

Gerald T. Yagel added Monday that thus far the city hasn't applied for any other grants for sewer projects for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

And if any funds are to be forthcoming, he said city officials will have to file the applications for assistance by Feb. 15.

Yagel told the informal council session that the city will be paid 30 per cent of the cost for five sewer projects that have been completed under Public Law 660 as soon as it can show that employees who worked on the projects were paid minimum wages.

Yagel agreed with Councilman F. Reid Ervin that the city was involved in "technicalities and red-tape" and that these were the causes of the delayed payments.

Yagel indicated that the city was considered high on the list of priorities for sewer line development, but indicated that nothing had been filed by Virginia Beach for the 1970-71 fiscal year.

"I certainly hope that you will get some of the $23 million pie for projects," he said, and told City Clerk Richard Webbon that applications could be filed with a minimum of engineering required.

City Manager Roger M. Scott said he would provide Webbon with assistance in filing applications by the Feb. 15 deadline in the form of his assistant, George Hanbury, and the Department of Community Services.

The applications, however, must carry with them a guarantee that the city will provide the necessary additional funds for the projects and evidence that the applications are commensurate with regional development plans.

One of the problems in the past, Yagel said, has been that the city has filed for projects that would service areas some time in the future.

He said the agencies involved will always pay more attention to immediate sewage problems in neighboring cities and try to resolve them before they confront projects far into the future.

In other matters, Councilman "Was asked by the Rev. Bill Brake to add five young people, all high school seniors, to the city's Drug Focus Committee. Brake said that only adults were now on the committee and that the young people could add the needed perspective to the group.

"Was asked by Travel and Tourist Development Coordinator Sam Scott to consider a $60,654 allocation to construct 12 additional slips at the Virginia Capes Temporary Marina at Rudee Inlet. Scott said that the addition might also provide a dock for 250-seat floating barge restaurant that would be at the end of the finger pier. But several councilmen said that approval of such a restaurant for one individual would not be fair and that it should be properly advertised and handled competitively.

Councilman Robert B. Cromwell Jr. said he felt that any further additions to the temporary marina might jeopardize its temporary status, and that it could well become a permanent site.

"We're turning into a real sport fishing marina, and I'm delighted with that, but I still question how temporary it is," Cromwell said. "If this is going to be permanent, then we ought to sell it now."

New Center Planned

Plans for Pembroke Meadows Shopping Center, a 75,000 square foot community center of approximately 25 shops, were announced today by Jim Hall, spokesman for Pembroke Realty and Insurance Agency, Inc., leasing and managing agents.

Approximately eight acres fronting Independence Boulevard to Witchduck Road will comprise the center, located one mile north of Pembroke Mall. Immediately adjacent is the recently completed Meadows Professional Building with 10 suites available for doctors, dentists, and other professional people.

Planned for the center is a neighborhood theatre, a branch bank, drug store, restaurant, and specialty shops. A Safeway Supermarket will be a prime tenant.

The Pembroke Center, located in the middle of the Pembroke Meadows residential community, will connect the old town between Pembroke Mall and Robins Corner. There will be more than 3,000 families within 1 mile of the new center.

"Like most developments in the Pembroke area, the Pembroke Meadows Shopping Center will be about two years ahead of schedule," said Hall. "This is due to the popularity of the Pembroke location and the development of Independence Boulevard as a North-South transportation artery."

The Pembroke Meadows Shopping Center's architectural styling and color will blend perfectly with the adjacent residential communities. A Mansard roof line, usually associated with residential construction, will be used on the center and the same texture of brick that comprises the entrance archways of the Pembroke Meadows community, will be used to build the shopping center. The architectural firm of Dudley, Morrisette, Cederquist & Associates have designed the center.

Sojourners Re-Activate

The Cape Henry Chapter No. 424 of the National Sojourners Inc. has re-activated after two years of being dormant.

Major George Hendrickson, president, said the group will resume meeting the second Thursday of each month at the Fort Story Officers Open Mess.

The group is comprised of Masons in good standing who are, or have been, commissioned officers in any branch of the service.

Their purpose is to promote youth programs and Americanism. They will provide speakers on Americanism for interested groups.

A Problem of Fractions

The frustrations, despair and disappointment of redistricting the State for the best representation of all its citizens has become painfully obvious this week during the hearings by the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

Cities are pitted against each other in a struggle to retain their present number of legislators or to obtain more. Nearly every conceivable type of plan has been introduced and discussed. And few seem workable.

Based on the latest census figures, Virginia Beach and Norfolk will be assigned four senators for the next 10 years, two and a half for Norfolk, one and a half for this resort city. The General Assembly now faces the problem of what to do to resolve the fractions. The legislators presently favor the single-member district system which obviously will not work in this particular case unless a combined district is established.

Norfolk City Council has officially opposed the single district concept, preferring its present citywide election. This is understandable since its three senators, all from the same area, would be competing against each other in the next election.

Virginia Beach hopes, of course, to gain the extra senatorial seat but lacks the population to make a firm stand. Mayor Donald Rhodes suggested this week that the city be joined with the Eastern Shore for a two-seat district. Norfolk Senators Henry Howell and Peter Babalas propose that a district be established combining a portion of Virginia Beach and Norfolk. This would incorporate Kempsville Borough with Norfolk.

Mayor Rhodes' suggestion, while undoubtedly made in good faith, seems the less probable. The Shore's forty-five thousand residents would be separated from the largest portion of its district by the Chesapeake Bay.

There is no solution that will satisfy all residents of both cities. The decision must be made for the betterment of the most people and it would seem that the most logical plan at this time would be to establish a district on the border of Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

In another ten years the General Assembly will again face redistricting to comply with the next census. Virginia Beach, with its continuous population growth, will at that time be in a better position to obtain its second senatorial seat.

There appears to be no present solution that will favor this city. But the time will come.

Burglar Alarm Dilemma

Some months ago City Council approved an ordinance imposing a five dollar fee on Virginia Beach businessmen for each false burglar alarm call answered by police. The ruling was justified. The number of unnecessary calls had grown to such proportions that a considerable number of tax dollars was being spent on this particular portion of law enforcement.

But the businessmen have a point, too. For insurance purposes they are required to install protective electronic alarm systems in their firms. They contended when the ordinance was proposed, and they contend now, that most of the false alarms are malfunctions of the compulsory equipment rather than negligence of personnel.

The way it stands now, the businessmen are not only required to bear the expense of purchasing and installing the systems but are faced with additional expense caused by climatic conditions, short circuits, and other "acts of God" as one owner claims. The fee is modest, but it continues to snowball each month.

The city must be protected financially, the businesses must be protected physically and financially, so what is the answer?

A study was launched this week to, hopefully, find the answer. Perhaps some of the burden will eventually fall back on the shoulders of possibly the real culprit—the manufacturers of these systems. This is one study that seems valid and necessary.

A CROWN FOR ELIZABETH, by Mary M. Luke, New York, Coward, 1970.

A CROWN FOR ELIZABETH, by Mary Luke, is an exciting chronicle of the Tudors, beginning with Henry VIII's divorce from Catherine of Aragon and ending with the death of Mary Tudor.

History is all here: The separation of church from state; Henry's six wives and their various fates; the young King Edward religiously indoctrinated by the council; the reign of "Bloody" Mary, with its reversal to fanatic Catholicism and daily burnings at the stake; Mary's marriage late in life to Philip II of Spain, which further estranged her subjects.

But A CROWN FOR ELIZABETH is more than a catalogue of historical events. With great sensitivity and balance the author reveals the emotions of these characters caught in the web of 16th century intrigue. How extraordinary the love of the ageing Katherine Parr for her young step-children; how frail the constitution of Edward for his responsibilities and how manipulated his mind at the hands of the council; how passionately Mary loved her absent husband, desiring above all else to bear his child; finally, how Elizabeth, a virtual prisoner during Mary's reign, is overwhelmed by news of the long-awaited succession. Falling on her knees before the council, she sobers hysterically, "It is God's will!"

This is indeed an exciting, compassionate story, superbly told.

'You've Killed the Bottle — Now Let's Kill People'

'Barefoot' Is Rare

The Lake Wright Dinner Theatre's presentation of "Barefoot in the Park" is one of those rare productions that leaves a critic absolutely befuddled... there's nothing to criticize.

Playwright Neil Simon created one of his most delightful works in this 3-act comedy, sprinkling the warm and tender story of young married love with humorous situations and beautiful characterizations.

The play itself is an excellent vehicle with which to work and the Lake Wright Dinner Theatre is doing a superb job of writing every bit of enjoyment out of it. They possibly can, giving the audience a peephole look at their own pleasure in bringing the play to life.

The story is one that will appeal to all age groups. New-lweds Corie and Paul Bratter make their first home a small apartment on the top floor of a New York City brownstone. It has no bathtub, they have to walk across the bed to get to the closet and there's a hole in the skylight that deposits snowdrifts in their living room. But the real drawback to their apartment is climbing the five flights—six with the front stoop—to reach it. And it is from this that much of the hilarity comes.

All of the characters—the newlyweds, the bride's mother, the telephone repairman and the delivery man—have their turn at crashing through the door breathless, speechless and near exhaustion from the climb. All except one, that is, Victor Velasco, a slightly aging man-about-town, is accustomed to the climb. He lives in the attic above the Bratter's apartment and usually slips through their bedroom window to get to his quarters to avoid paying the rent.

There you have the cast. And they are delightful. Nancy Simpson and J. Michael Hunter portray the young couple. Both are college students and have appeared in local theatre in less important roles. But their performances in "Barefoot" will undoubtedly be a turning point and drop some very choice roles in their young laps.

Miss Simpson is lovely and effervescent and charming in her bouncy portrayal of Corie. And Hunter is one of the freshest young actors around local theatre, blessed not only with great talent, especially for comedy, but also a very definite appeal to the ladies.

Roby Brown as Velasco makes debut on the Lake Wright stage but he is a most familiar face to Peninsula Theatre-goers through his long association with Wedgewood. His performance here is in keeping with his usual high standards and develops much of the laughs in the play.

Pat Finkelstein as the bride's mother is another popular Tidewater actress and a dependable one for a good performance. But she truly outdoes herself in "Barefoot". It is a tasty role, one that offers the actress a chance for humor, warmth and sympathy and Mrs. Finkelstein takes advantage of the opportunity.

There are only two minor roles in this play. But the actors don't allow them to stay minor long. David Nichols as a waiter on the delivery man but for the few short minutes he is on stage, the play is his. His performance is slapstick comedy at its very best. Dennis Stephens is the telephone repairman and he, too, comes through with flying colors, delivering his very funny lines with a great flair for comedy. This young man has certainly come a long way professionally since making his debut at the Lake Wright a few months ago in the popular "Fantasticks".

Now, to this outstanding play and excellent performances, add a perfectly lovely set and the direction of Tim Jones and you have a package of enormous entertainment.

"Barefoot" is one of the most enjoyable comedies you'll ever see. Don't miss it.

By W. A. Leavell, Ph.D.

One of the flaws in our democratic elective system seems to be the office of Vice President. Don't get me wrong, I am not knocking the present Vice President because he is a bumper stickers say, Spiro is my hero.

From what I can read, Vice President Agnew did not seek the office. I can't see any indication that he is seeking to be on the ticket come the next election. In fact, I can't find anything in history to indicate that anyone in the United States has ever sought the office of Vice President.

It seems that the office is one that no one has ever wanted. I can't find anywhere in our political history where any candidate has opened an office in advance of the national convention, of either party or even a third party, or fourth, to promote themselves for that high office.

I can't even find any record of anyone ever saying even in a whisper or just a hint, that they would like to be considered for the office of Vice President.

Of course, the office is not much. The Vice President is not even in charge of vice. About the only thing he is or seems to be around in case the President should die in office. That is important but in a democratic system we could select any select another leader.

In some ways it is understandable that no one would seek the office. Who wants to be Number Two? All our glorious leaders want to be Number One.

After some of the things that have happened to our Presidents I don't think being number one is all that desirable. The job seems to be a thankless one at best. If the press doesn't eat you alive the job itself has a way of ruining your health. If that is not enough, someone, just as like as not, might take a shot at them for real.

Not many Vice Presidents have been in any great strain in so far as overwork is concerned and few have ever been in any real danger unless they were standing too close to the President.

It seems that for some reason custom permits the Presidential candidate to select his Vice Presidential running mate. I don't think that is fair. I think the voters should select the person for that high office. Why should the President be allowed to select his possible successor? Why shouldn't the Vice President run just like the President? For that matter, should the Vice President even be of the same party as the President?

Surely this country has many people who would not want to be President but would welcome the chance to be Vice President.

Take me for instance. I wouldn't want to be President. Not even for a minute. It would interfere with too much of my enjoyment. The White House is not my idea of an ideal place to live. I get sick and all that flying around would be more than I could take.

Being Vice President is something else. I could keep up with my fishing, writing, and messing around and no one would miss me. In fact, I expect the President and all our "Flock" in Congress and Washington would welcome the idea of having a Vice President out from under foot most of the time. Of course, on pay day I would be happy to be on hand with my hand out.

I think I just might come out and be the first person to ever seek the office of Vice President. I don't have the money to open a national office or life a staff but who needs all that just for Vice President? By this column I am letting both of the big political parties know that I am seeking the office. If neither of them are open to my offer to serve, I am not above accepting the second spot on the ticket of a third, fourth or fifth party. Being new to the political game I don't want to be too hard on please.

I elected, I promise to stay out of sight and keep quiet on all issues. This will be hard on the news media but it will save the taxpayers a lot of money. I am for motherhood, lower taxes, less crime, less government spending, more services and more of everything for everybody. I can get along with Democrats and Republicans if they let me alone. I am not particularly fond of Congress but I just love the bean soup they serve at their restaurant. I wouldn't want the job for more than one term. I just don't think I could take all that hub-bub too long.

All you solid citizens that want to contribute to my campaign fund just send money (cash, no checks please) to your local paper and the editor can send it to me. I promise to spend it all.

'No' to Plant

Two questions are again involved in this week's Sun Survey.

Response continued to come in on the question of two weeks ago: "Should the State establish services and more of everything for everybody. I can get along with Democrats and Republicans if they let me alone. I am not particularly fond of Congress but I just love the bean soup they serve at their restaurant. I wouldn't want the job for more than one term. I just don't think I could take all that hub-bub too long."

Residents are obviously concerned over the city's voiced opposition to this park and, even with this week's questionnaires, hold fast to their vote in favor of the park. As one woman commented "YES, YES, 4,000 TIMES YES!"

Last week we asked "Do you favor approval of a second stage sewage plant at Dam Neck which will dump its effluent into the Atlantic Ocean?"

Here again, readers came through with a unanimous stand—a hard "no".

One man commented "Why doesn't the City Council Manager DEMAND a 'Third Stage' sewage plant that one reads of in the news media? HRSO (Hampton Roads Sanitation District) plans five years, there is time to do 'tomorrow's' job through proper planning today!"

And still another came through with a very explicit statement of his feelings. But since it may be offensive to some we have withheld his comment. We can safely say, however, that the man is violently opposed to the proposed plant.

A woman pointed out that "Much can change in 5 years. Such plans may not even be acceptable if Federal regulations are established. We cannot approve this plant now when so much can change in 5 years."

We ran a question on the signboards several months ago when the issue first came to light. The response was very much in favor of strenuous regulations on construction of these signs.

Because of the controversy that arose Tuesday at a hearing on the proposed ordinance, we repeat that question this week for those who may have missed their "voice" the first time.

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Do you favor the city's proposed ordinance regulating the construction of signboards?

Your comments and signed letters would be appreciated also.

THERE'S ALWAYS ONE—

Police Department Is Now 'Televised'

The Virginia Beach Police Department has become the first in Tidewater and one of the first such law enforcement agencies in the state to acquire a "video-tape unit".

The unit was purchased as a training tool to increase the department's capabilities in meeting increasing demands in stepped up programs of training police officers.

Included in the unit is a camera for filming tapes, a combination recorder-playback device, and a television monitor for the purpose of viewing the tapes.

The camera is designed to be used in stationary position on a tripod or as a portable unit which can be carried to any location for the filming of required material. A microphone attached to the camera permits recording of all sounds onto the tape at the time of filming subjects.

One unique feature of the camera is its sensitivity. It is capable of recording any picture and/or sound which can be seen with the naked human eye or heard by the human ear. This filming of pictures is possible using only available light without employing additional lighting such as flash bulbs or flood lights.

The recording equipment is also designed to allow the dubbing in a sound track onto a tape which has been photographed earlier at a different location.

The design of the television monitor set not only provides for the viewing of video-tapes but also provides for recording video-tapes of any program which might be shown over a standard, commercial, television station, thus permitting delayed broadcasting of the program.

The tapes used in filming have a 30-minute time capacity and may be used over again simply by erasing whatever subject matter may have been recorded earlier.

The flexibility of the unit is illustrated in the fact that tapes prepared with the camera and recorder may be shown on any television set available on the commercial retail market. The combined weight of the camera and recorder is only 24 pounds which allows one person to carry the equipment to any field location for operation.

Perhaps the most important feature of the unit is the filming of information which might not be available through normal channels required in the instruction of police officers under actual conditions and reof another person for reasons other than self-defense. A total of 183 such offenses were recorded in 1970; a total of 188 incidents occurred during 1969. These offenses were committed through the use of a gun, knife or similar cutting instrument, or other weapon.

This decreasing trend was also noted in the crime of burglary, involving the breaking into or otherwise illegal entry into private residences and/or commercial business firm structures. While a total of 1,497 with the largest percentage of decrease seen in the burglary of private homes.

One of the areas which noted an increase was that of grand larceny (involving thefts exceeding a loss totalling over $100). A total of 1,555 such incidents were recorded last year as compared to 1,116 during 1969.

The crime of auto theft was another in which an increase was noted during 1970, with 297 such incidents occurring last year as compared to a total of 270 during 1969.

The most notable increase was noted in violations of narcotic and drug control laws. This includes the arrest of 287 persons last year charged with possession and/or sale of various types of narcotics and drugs, or arrested for offenses which were related to drug abuse or classified as resulting from the use of drugs. These arrests resulted in the filing of 491 charges.

In the same field in 1969 a total of 125 persons were arrested and 163 charges were filed.

While the report reflects an increase in the city's crime rate in 1970 it is interesting to note that an increase was also reported in the number of persons arrested on charges of committing these crimes.

A total of 3,561 criminal offenses were recorded during the year as opposed to a similar total of 3,279 such offenses during 1969, while a comparative increase was also made in the clearance of crimes in 1970 through the arrest of 686 persons as compared to the arrest of 688 during 1969.

It is also important to note that the criminal offenses referred to were committed by persons of all ages, juveniles and adults, and involved arrests made by men of the juvenile and detective divisions and uniformed personnel.

Those connected with law enforcement are quick to point out that it is virtually impossible to pinpoint any one deciding factor which attributed to an increase in a given region, since this involves a great number of contributing factors such as economic and social levels of the people, their physical surroundings, their family backgrounds, and the very physical nature of the geographical location in which they live and work.

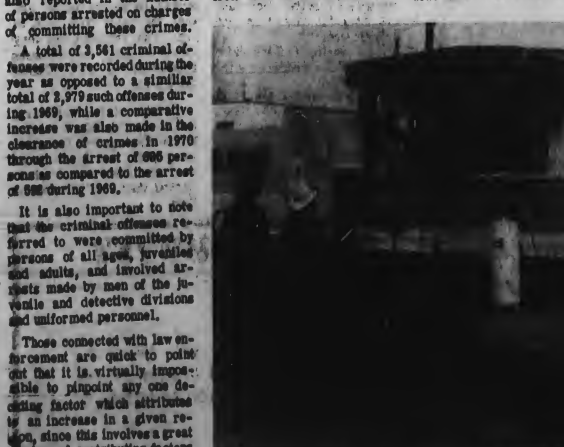

While a causal evaluation of this picture of increased cri-

Restaurants Burglarized

Police continue their search for suspects in the burglarizing of two Virginia Beach dining establishments last weekend resulting in the loss of over $800 in cash.

Investigators reported thieves entered the Burger-Chief restaurant on Indian River Road, ripped open a small safe, and made off with an estimated $500.

Officials also said thieves forced entry into the Martine Restaurant on Shore Drive and stole an estimated $115 from assorted cash containers.

Occupants of this house trailer managed to escape to safety, although a family pet dog perished in the fire, when flames engulfed the dwelling in the Trailer Village in the 900 block of Virginia Beach Boulevard Wednesday morning. Men of the Seatack and Beach Borough fire departments battled the blaze in below freezing temperatures. An investigation has been launched into cause of the fire.

Accidents Kill Three 'Volunteers' Install Navy Men

The deaths of three Navy enlisted men in two unrelated single vehicle accidents Tuesday raised the Virginia Beach highway fatality toll for the year to four.

Police officials said Robert H. Young, 19, attached to the Portsmouth Naval Hospital was fatally injured early Tuesday morning when his auto, reportedly travelling at a high rate of speed crashed through a large highway warning sign approximately 1000 feet from S. Lynnhaven Road. Investigators said the auto continued on, ripping out 100 feet of fencing before slamming into a utility pole.

A passenger in the auto, identified as James H. Walker of Portsmouth, was injured in the accident.

Authorities said the second accident Tuesday night, which claimed the lives of two other Navy men, was practically identical to an accident of several weeks ago in which one person died.

Both accidents occurred on Independence Boulevard a short distance from White Acres Road. Both accidents reportedly involved the cars slamming into the same utility pole, and ripping the vehicles in half.

Those fatally injured were identified as Ashley R. Jenkins, 21 and Tony D. Walts, 21, reportedly received head injuries. Officials at Portsmouth Naval Hospital listed Jenkins as being in serious condition, while Walts was listed as being in good condition.

Officials said Prince, Chapman, Jenkins, and Walts were all attached to the USS Suffolk County berthed at the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base.

Student Charged In Fight

Officials say they have charged Rudolph Whitehurst, Jr., with malicious assault as the result of the injury of a Kellam High School student.

Whitehurst, 19, of Blackwater Loop, who is also a student at the school was charged in connection with the injury of another student, identified as Ralph S. Petty received lacerations of the head when he was reportedly struck with a broom handle during a fight at the school two weeks ago.

Authorities said another student, identified as George M. Brown, 18, of North Landing Road, also sustained head lacerations during the same incident.

Both Brown and Petty received emergency medical treatment of their injuries but did not require hospitalization.

Body Found

The body of a Navy enlisted man, whose death has been attributed to accidental drowning, was discovered Monday floating in waters of the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base near Pier 15.

Officials identified him as EN2 Michael Neal Combs, 22, of Maryville, Tenn.

Authorities said Combs had been reported as missing since Dec. 8 from his duty station onboard the tank landing ship USS Grant County.

Today's tip for safer winter driving from Chief of Police Col. W.W. Davis: When trying to stop on an icy pavement, "pump" your brakes—don't jam them on. An intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control. In addition, this technique has the added advantage of providing a flashing brake light warning to following motorists.

Paul J. Mauch was honored Saturday night as the 1970 "Fireman of the Year" of the Beach Borough Volunteer Fire Department during the installation of the unit's newly elected officers.

Mauch was chosen for the award on the basis of his devotion to his unit and for outstanding performance of his responsibilities. Mauch was nominated for the award by vote of his fellow fireman.

The new board of officers who will guide the unit's operation during the coming year include G. S. Johnson, Pres.; Roy Pallett, Vice-Pres.; R. B. Alley, Sec.; P. J. Mauch, Treas.; and Father F. V. Bambrick.

Asst. School Supt. Elmer Tarrall administered the oaths of office to each of the new officers, while charging them with the fulfillment of the responsibilities of their respective offices.

The swearing in ceremony was also marked by the introduction of newly appointed officers of each of the Department's three companies. Truck Company officers consist of F. G. Jones, Deputy Chief; E. B. Pinner, Capt.; and W. C. Johnson, Lt. Engine Company officers are J. W. Bailey, Deputy Chief; P. J. Mauch, Capt.; and P. C. Hubbard, Lt. Salvage Company officers include C. B. "Neal" Owens, Deputy Chief; R. B. Alley, Capt.; and Roy Pallett, Lt. E. B. Bayne, Chief of the paid Beach Borough Fire Department also holds the office of Chief in the Volunteer Fire Department.

As Tarrall introduced each of the newly elected officers he reminded those on hand for the event that the strength of the officers would depend upon the strength of support given them by men of the department, and that the strength of the Volunteer Fire Department would depend upon the support given the unit by the residents which the Volunteers have avowed to protect.

W. R. Gurley, who holds the position of Capt. in the Beach Borough Fire Dept. was honored by the Volunteers in the presentation of a plaque recognizing his outstanding devotion during the past 12 years as an instructor in the training of firemen within the department.

support given the "Volunteers" by these women.

The new board of officers of the Ladies Auxiliary is comprised of Jenny Pinner, Pres.; Peggy Jones, Vice Pres.; Carolyn Gray, Sec.; Beasley Morse, Treas.; and Ethel Wink, Chaplain.

A number of especially invited guests, and their ladies, were on hand to witness the ceremonies of the evening. The guest list included Roger Scott, City Manager; W. R. Hatchett, former City Mgr.; F. A. Dusch, former Mayor; Chief R. S. Pinner, Oceana Naval Air Station Fire Dept.; M. T. Holland, Director of the City Fire Prevention Bureau; George Held, Chief of the city's Public Safety Dispatchers office; R. A. Bailey, Suffolk Fire Chief; "Buddy" Bagley, Chesapeake Fire Chief; S. A. Harden, Norfolk Fire Chief; "Junior" Nelson, Portsmouth Fire Chief; and Chief and W. J. Lewis and Chief's of each of the various fire departments of the City of Virginia Beach.

Diagram of a drug abuser

These are a few of the signs that may indicate that a young person could be abusing drugs or using narcotics. While these symptoms are not proof of drug abuse (most could occur for several other reasons), they should serve to alert parents and friends that a problem may exist.

If you're not sure, talk with your family physician. If you suspect, ask your child point blank, "Are you taking drugs?"

It's a sad thing to have to ask someone you love, but saying "Goodbye" is even sadder still.

Madame president

She was raised on sawdust, says WIC leader

MRS. ALEXANDER GOSSMAN, JR., career-woman, 1971 model, in a business suit, answers phone at John Aragona Enterprises.

By Helen Crist

Look no further than Mrs. Alexander (Kay) Gossman, Jr., 2416 Indian Hill Road, for the prototype of the successful career woman.

Secretary for 14 years to John Aragona Enterprises, she's recently been reelected president of Women in Construction.

Explaining WIC, Kay says, "It's an organization for women actively employed in some phase of construction....craftsmen, secretaries, bookkeepers....In fact, our national president is owner of a plumbing firm."

That Kay should be involved in the business of construction seems predictable.

Her father was a lumberman, and Kay says, "I was raised on sawdust."

"Dad and I were buddies. He'd take me out in the lumber fields and he could look at a tree and he'd know exactly how many board feet there were in it."

Kay, one of 11 children, two girls and nine boys, was raised in Wilmar, Arkansas.

"Ours was a religious, God-fearing family," she recalls. "I can remember sitting around at night popping corn and singing hymns....we had a wonderful life together."

And with nine brothers for playmates, Kay confides that she wasn't exactly a doll anymore the tomboy type with a leaning toward sports.

Schooling was in the business field, for which Kay is thankful.

She's always worked, all her life. This continued to be a pattern after she and Aleck, then in the Navy, were married in 1944.

Kay says she has a need to keep busy. And part of her ability to maintain a successfully even balance between office and home duties, lies with "Aunt Minnie," her housekeeper.

With a son, Larry, nine, at home, and her husband, who is now an electronics engineer with Tracor Inc., and commuting from Washington, D.C., it would seem that home pressures have eased from earlier days.

There are two other sons: Rod, married to the former Joan Krynski, of Princess Anne County. They have two children: Jean, 4, and Jason, 10 months, and live in Birchwood Gardens.

Then there's Skip, 22, a VPI senior.

Frank and down-to-earth, Kay says, "I detest cooking."

For ten years a den mother, she admits that her boys can cook better, through scouting lessons, than she can.

"But I love to get in there on Thanksgiving and cook up the turkey and watch it turn brown," she says, in a strangely appealing Southwestern accent.

And she believes that any woman should keep fully occupied, regardless of what she's doing, home-making, or career-making. "That way there's no time to feel sorry for yourself."

Club work, for her, is stimulating...."you come alive when you mingle and talk with people," she says.

Kay's a member of National Secretaries Association, Virginia Beach Toastmistress Club, Tidewater Association of Home Builders, the Kempsville Chapter of The Order of Eastern Star.

She's met and dealt with all manner of people through extensive service travel, and through Aleck's present civilian position which allows him free space available air travel for himself and the family.

This afforded them a marvelous Christmas around-the-world flight in 1968.

"We left Norfolk one freezing morning, and that afternoon we were sunning ourselves at Waukegan."

But that trip very nearly proved disastrous.

At Beirut, Lebanon, they waited, one morning, to board a Pan-Am flight to Frankfurt, Germany. But that was the morning, unfortunately, that the newspaper carried headlines reading "Johnson Sells 50 Jets to Israel."

"And here we were," Kay says, "Americans in an Arabic country."

They were frightened - so much so that they didn't dare speak English aloud in the airport, which was surrounded by armed guards.

"Suddenly a flock of helicopters came roaring over. Men dropped from them and before we knew what was happening, there were explosives all over the place."

"They blew up 13 jets before they finished, and fled in the helicopters. Fortunately no one was killed."

"But there was pandemonium at the airport."

"We just held our breath until things calmed down, and the Pan-Am plane was cleared for flight. Then we dashed to it, and what a relief it was when it took off," Kay said.

And if this was an experience that was nearly a tragedy, there are others, on the lighter side, that Kay recalls.

One, concerns her association with WIC, when she attended a convention at the Palmer House in Chicago.

There was a doctor's convention booked at the same time.

Some of the WIC girls were walking down the hall when a group of men stopped them and asked who they were.

"We're Women in Construction," they said.

A slight pause of appraisal.

"Well, you don't look like brick layers to us."

Save That Hose

One more Pinkie is nearly finished as Mrs. J. Malcolm Firth stuffs the little head with jersey.

Pinkie needs help, he wants your hose

Whoa there gals, don't throw away those nylon stockings or pantyhose just because they've sprung a run.

Put them to work for a worthy cause. Pass them on (spanking clean, of course) to the Woman's Auxiliary of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Four of those stockings will then be stuffed into the head of an adorable puppet called "Pinkie."

Pinkie's a cuddly reassuring friend to every child who undergoes the sometimes traumatic experience of an overnight stay in the hospital.

To get to the source of the puppet story, we contacted Mrs. J. Malcolm Firth, 3609 Holly Road.

"A group of women from Aragona, under Mrs. Roland Cullifer, started the puppets in 1967," she said. "In two years, ten women made some 2000 puppets."

But unfortunately, the women were mostly service connected, and in due course they moved away and the program was discontinued.

So popular were the Pinkies with children however, that the auxiliary wanted to renew the program.

So they asked Mrs. Firth, a veteran of many years of puppet-making at the University of Virginia, if she would take charge.

She agreed. And by herself, in less than one year's time she turned out 500 Pinkies.

But the pace was too trying, and Mrs. Bernard Bateman, chairman, looked for additional help for Mrs. Firth.

"Mrs. Sidney Kellam graciously offered the services of her auxiliary sewing group," Mrs. Firth said.

"And now, since, last June, they have made some 400 puppets," she added.

The pink and white striped percale is cut from a pattern. Around the neck of the puppet goes a saucy ruffle. The enchanting clown face is topped by a pointed cap.

It's this cap that requires four nylon stockings to fill it out. Hence, the great urgency for hosiery discards.

Princess Anne Woman's Club and Sertoma Club of the Beach will sponsor "Fashion For Heart's Sake", Feb. 27 at the Civic Center.

The show will begin at 8 p.m., followed by dancing to Clark Godfrey's Orchestra at 9:30 p.m.

The cabaret style show will benefit the cardiovascular center and research program at Norfolk General Hospital.

Professional models by La Vogue will show women's fashions. Men models are Al Malthe, Dr. Eugene Postasse, Thomas W. Atkinson, Larry Daugherty, Bill Campbell and other local business men. They will show men's wear from a special

New York collection and The Hub.

Mrs. George L. Aldridge is general chairman. Other chairmen are Mrs. M. B. Zoll, Dr. J. F. Zoll, Carter Luck.

Mrs. Lacey Robeson, Mrs. M. F. Camp, and Thomas W. Atkinson comprise the ticket committee.

Decorators are Mrs. C. W. Jernigan and committee. Ushers are Sertoma Club members.

Alarms

event of illegal, or forced, entry into a building when the business firm is closed to the public.

The activation of this unit automatically, and without any audible sound at the business firm's location, transmits a signal over a series of telephone lines connected to "control boards" located at the 2nd and 3rd Police Precinct headquarters buildings and in the police communications room at police headquarters at the Princess Anne Courthouse complex.

Capt. R. K. Harstead, director of the police Communications Division, was charged with the responsibility of determining the number of false alarms any business firm should be billed for during each month.

Records indicate that during 1970 a total of 1,374 alarms were received over the system indicating an emergency requiring police to be dispatched to the scenes, supposedly involving a hold-up, break-in or similar emergency.

Each of these alarms required immediate dispatching of at least two police units to the scene, for the purpose of investigation and lending whatever assistance might be required.

Of the alarms received last year by police 530 came from banks and/or financial institutions, with the remaining 844 from other commercial establishments. Investigation showed that 99.5% of these "alarms" proved to be false alarms.

Records also indicate that the majority of these alarms are received by police between the hours of 8 and 9 a.m. when employees are reporting to places of business for their daily activities, or when janitor personnel are leaving upon the completion of early morning "clean-up operations". A large number of alarms have also been received from business firms with late evening hours of operation, at a time when employees would be leaving the location or when janitorial crews are at work.

Officials of Virginia National Bank and First and Merchants Bank recently requested a meeting with Capt. Harstead to discuss the continuing increase in false alarms transmitted over the system, and pointing out the increasing costs to them through their being assessed for false alarm resorts.

Several of these officials contend these false alarms are not the result of employee error; i.e. accidentally setting off the alarm on entering or leaving the building, erroneously setting the alarm, or accidentally coming in contact with the alarm activator during normal operations; but rather due through other means which accidentally "set off" the alarms.

Capt. Harstead indicates he feels there is some merit in this attitude of these officials, and therefore has established guidelines to assist them. Business firms are not assessed any fee for false alarms received during the period of one hour before or after the normal hour of a business firm's daily opening or closing, in order to compensate for possible employee error. He also admits that the very nature of the system, involving its extreme sensitivity, could also be a contributing factor in the large number of false alarms. This involves accidental activation of the system in adverse weather conditions involving winds of high velocity; extreme humidity conditions; sudden surges of electrical power or loss of power; the striking of the alarm activation unit by loud sounds, sounds of high frequencies, and/or light beams of extreme brightness.

As a result of the increasing number of police officers being required to respond to alerts received over the system, resulting not only in removing them from other responsibilities involving protection of residents of the city but also exposing them to increased danger of injury resulting from having to travel through traffic on roadways at increased rates of speed to reach the scene as quickly as possible, it was decided to make an overall evaluation of the present system.

This involves deciding how much good, if any, has been realized through the penalizing of business firms with a $5 assessment for each false alarm from that firm, or if there isn't a real need in revising the mechanical operation of the system.

Capt. Harstead perhaps best summed up the feelings of his department, and perhaps those of a good number of business men, over the necessity for further study of the "Silent Alarm System" when he said, "We're not interested in penalizing business firms, but in cutting down the number of false alarms in order to free more police officers to devoting their time to the protection of our

Needham Solos

Navy Ensign Lester D. Needham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester E. Needham of 4744 Deerfield Lane, completed the first step to becoming a Naval Aviator by soloing a Navy T-34B "Mentor" aircraft at Training Squadron One, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

The event marked the termination of five months of intensive training which included extensive academic, military and physical training.

Upon completion of 18 months of flight training, he will receive his Navy "Wings of Gold".

million, he said, "but that figure is tops."

Another matter covered during the meeting was the proposed Bayside High School site, but no conclusions were reached on that matter, he said.

The group instructed Brickell to continue negotiating for a school site. It will still be between 45 and 65 acres in size, he said.

As soon as the negotiations are completed the board will return to meet with council to find some way to buy the land, he said.

"One thing that has to be emphasized is that nobody was attacked and everything was very cordial," he said. "There was a lot of soul-searching that went on, though."

The request for a reevaluation of the plans for schools came after council voted, in an informal session, to go into the closed meeting with the school officials.

The meeting was scheduled to be held between only the council and the School Board, with the discussion to center around failure of the bond issue. But word leaked out that the Tidewater Association of Homebuilders, a special interest group, had requested and received permission from Rhodes to appear at the closed meeting Tuesday evening.

However, the Virginia Freedom of Information Act prohibits the appearance of such a group before a closed meeting of a public group.

Later, when newsmen asked to attend the meeting, Rhodes' city hall secretary said that since the TABH would be allowed to attend, the meeting would necessarily be open.

Announcements were made during evening news programs on radio and television that the meeting would be public, and brought out members of the Council of Civic Organizations, the Parent Teachers Association, and several other interested citizens.

At the opening of the meeting, Rhodes said he hadn't anticipated the growth of the council and school board to include about 40 people, and that he didn't know what to do.

"My feeling was that it was a conference between two public bodies and it should be closed," Rhodes said. "But much has happened in the interim and here we all are."

After deciding to let the public address the council on the issue, Rhodes asked if School Board Chairman J. W. Buffington would like to make a statement.

Buffington did, and said that he was "quite frank to say that I don't know who called the meeting" and didn't know who could come and who couldn't.

At the last School Board meeting, Buffington asked for and got a motion to write to council asking for an audience, to discuss "the recent defeat of the (bond) issue."

He said he would be glad to discuss the issues with the council, but added that "I wish we could sit down and thrash things out and call each other names if we want to" in a closed session.

"It is not our intent to place the burden in your laps," Buffington said, "but we don't know where to go from here and that's why we're here."

Rhodes asked if the TABH representative George Cistola, would like to address the open meeting but was told that the TABH had nothing to add to the discussion at this meeting.

In the face of what would apparently have developed into a relatively silent public meeting, Rhodes asked an assistant city attorney for a ruling on whether the council could close its session.

After a delay of about 15 minutes, Jay A. Richardson reported to Rhodes "that council can call a special meeting and it can be closed."

With that, the council began to file out of the room, but was told that it would have to vote on the closure of the meeting.

Although the session was never called to order, Councilman Floyd Waterfield made a formal motion to close the session.

Without questioning why, the council voted to sequester itself from the public view and adjourned to its conference room.

Still in question is whether the council and school board could meet together in closed session without violating the Freedom of Information Act.

Creative Photography

Six Hampton Institute students are exhibiting black and white creative photography works in the second floor gallery of the College's Museum, through February 12, daily from 1 to 5 p.m.

The 45 works exhibited are of portraits, still life, and abstracts, said Mrs. Julia Vodka, College Museum director.

Subjects for the photographs include such scenes as a tree stump against the sky, a girl silhouetted against sky and water, lights used to create an abstract illusion, a pretty girl sitting quietly on a park bench, and many other areas of photography.

One of the students exhibiting, Andre Butts, is currently showing some of his work in an art show at the 20th Century Gallery in Colonial Williamsburg. He is the only student to be asked to participate in the gallery show.

How much should we save each week?

It's a tough question. And the answer has to be one you can live with. An amount that you can comfortably set aside each week.

We've made a chart of suggested savings based on saving 5% of your weekly income. Naturally, you can save more or less than the 5% figure. But it's a good starting place. And it will quickly give you an idea of just how much you should be saving. Once you decide how much to save choosing a place to save is important. At F&M we pay the highest legal bank interest rate on regular savings—4½% per annum, daily interest, compounded continuously. That means your money earns interest every single day it's on deposit. And you can withdraw any amount at any time with no loss of interest. The chart shows how your savings will grow with regular deposits and continuous interest.

You can make deposits at any of F&M's more than 80 offices. Or sign up for Save-O-Matic, and we'll automatically transfer the amount you want to save from your checking to your savings account on the date you specify each month.

We'd like to have your savings account. We'd like to talk over your savings goals, and show you how to reach them.

Phone

"The phone stays off quite a bit," Wilson said. "No use to call them; might as well be resting."

Mrs. W. F. Bloodworth, who lives off Lotus Road, said the new increased phone rates "have come hard on us." Her husband, a retired Navy chief engineman, suffers from lung cancer and the Bloodworths consider a phone a necessity.

Many of those attending the meeting shared the Bloodworths' feelings. "Many of the people in this area are elderly and live alone," said one woman. "A telephone is their only contact with help, but they can't afford a phone on their social security checks," she said.

Mrs. Bloodworth, however, has no complaint about the company's service. "Usually they do come the next day to fix it," she said. The Sun's survey showed that price, not service was the primary concern. The subscribers differed on the quality of the service—those in some areas said they received "good to excellent service" while others said repair service often took three to four days.

Other common complaints focus on the inability of the company to provide single-party lines. Many say the company has told them that the only service available to them is the four-party system due to their location.

Another complaint centers around the fact that when one party on a four-party line is using the phone, the other three users of the line are able to pick up their phones and listen to the conversation. As one woman said, "Out here, your business is everybody's business because they can listen to your phone calls."

But, despite what the residents term as poor service and high rates, most don't blame the company's manager, Bob Turner, or the servicemen who work for First Colony.

"Mr. Turner is, I believe, a fair and just man," Hathaway said at the meeting. "He's just in a precarious situation." Most telephone subscribers blame First Colony's parent company, Continental Telephone Co., the nation's third largest telephone company.

"Payne," the complainant from Princess Anne Borough, told the group, "Turner is a victim of circumstance. There's a lack of support from top management."

The councilman told the civic league that First Colony's franchise is growing with the development of new subdivisions in southern Virginia Beach.

"My concern is that they (First Colony) don't have enough manpower or equipment to give us the service they say they will," Payne said.

A common concern among subscribers in the rural portions of Princess Anne and Pungo centers on how the company will use the money from the increased telephone rates. "I'll bet they use it (the increased revenue) to install new phones in new areas," said one woman at the meeting.

But, if the phone company is being raked over the coals, the three members of the Corporations Commission are sharing half the load of criticism.

"The three men are elderly," Waterfield said. "And there should be some members to represent people and not just the corporations."

Canada said the men on the commission "average more than 70 years." He said, "As long as we have only three men on the SCC, we don't have a voice."

City Atty. J. Dale Bimson was present at the meeting to explain the city's futile attempt to stop the increase in phone rates. He said the city's representative at the SCC hearing, a certified public accountant from Haskins and Sells in New York, was able to save $11,000 a year, but was unable to curb the rate increase which was granted November 17.

Meanwhile, the accusations continue among the subscribers of First Colony Telephone Co. and the outcome of the controversy remains clouded. It is almost certain Payne and Waterfield will try to rally city council behind their cause and force the telephone company into a service hearing before the SCC.

Many of the Pungo area residents say they won't be satisfied until an appeal is lodged with the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals which is currently considering a similar rate increase case involving VEPCO. Others maintain it would be best to wait the court's ruling in the VEPCO case before filing the appeal.

Del. Guy has recommended a letter writing campaign listing specific grievances so he can present the SCC with proof of the alleged injustices of the phone system.

Some of the phone system are contemplating retaining a private attorney to present their case before the SCC.

But, whatever the route, the Back Bay residents attending the meeting last week made it clear they want their day in court regardless of their chances of winning.

As one man put it, "Any chance is more of a chance than we've got now."

A Week-End Retreat for Inspiration

Sandbridge, with all its summer beauty and warmth, can be a dismal place in the winter. And it was anything but pretty and warm recently when some 25 senior high school students, all members of the Methodist Youth Fellowship, arrived for a two-day retreat.

The forecast was for cold and clear—30 to 35 degrees, winds of 15 to 25 m.p.h. Even the Methodist Chapel didn't help much with its one oil stove and one fire stove for heat.

But the youngsters didn't mind the weather and inconvenience. They tackled both with the enthusiasm of youth.

They arrived ready for action, along with one station wagon loaded with wood, a cord of sleeping bags, and a brand new engaged couple and one older couple from the "establishment" to serve as chaperones.

The program dealt with serious time as well as playtime. Games and romps on the beach came during playtime. Serious time primarily concentrated on group sessions of movies and lectures on such things as morals, ethics and human relations.

The week-end was fun, inspiring...and full of calories! The youngsters "did a job of cooking only their mothers could match," reported a chaperone. They even came through on the spaghetti sauce.

There may have been a few bodies among the group when they showed off for home Sunday afternoon but all agreed they felt a little more inspired and a little wiser for the experience...even the "establishment" agreed.

Sports Club Picks Top Sportsmen

Tom Cahill, head football coach at West Point, must have looked at all the Navy officers in the audience Monday at Virginia Beach Sports Club Jam-boree and felt like a stranger in an alien country.

Any edge he may have felt about speaking at Fort Story, an Army installation, was probably lost when he was introduced to Lance Platz, honored as Virginia Beach's city high school football player. Platz plans to attend the Naval Academy and might be seeing Cahill on the gridiron in the near future.

Cahill joined master of ceremonies Bob Uecker, a former major league catcher with a knack for funny stories, at the club's 19th annual honors banquet which honored a wide section of Virginia Beach and Tidewater area athletes and sportsmen.

Platz's coach at Bayside, Robert G. Hicks, was named the outstanding coach in Virginia Beach. The former University of Florida football player lead Bayside to its first winning season in the school's history.

Andy Giles, a 3-year star for William and Mary's defense and a former Mary stand-out, was honored as Tidewater's outstanding athlete. In addition to being an All-Eastern selection, Giles was also an honor student at William and Mary.

A team mate, Robert Ilerb, was named by the club as Virginia's outstanding college football player. Herb was All-Southern Conference for three years, All-East, second team All-American and captain of the Indian football team this year.

Lt. Col. (Ret.) Howard Leary was recipient of the club's Joseph E. Healy Memorial Award which is presented annually to the club's outstanding member. George F. Darden Jr., last year's recipient, made the presentation.

The Sportsman of the Year Award went to Fred Bosard for his work with youth and neighborhood recreation programs in Virginia Beach.

Retiring president Al Wilson installed the Sports Club's new officers. They are: C. J. (Mike) Hayes, president; Bob Whitley, first vice president; John Griffin, second vice president; Jay Gorry, secretary; Dick Branch, treasurer; Don MacGarvey, sergeant-at-arms; and Rev. Jerry Holcomb, chaplain.

Also on hand for the banquet was Ernie Fears, former Norfolk State coach and currently head of the State's Selective Service Commission.

More than 400 members and guests attended the banquet.

Signs

the passage of this ordinance is that of a select few billboard enterprises.

"And while this is unfortunate, this industry has for years exploited the streets and highways of our city, and like the owner of the plant that dumps pollutants in our waters and smoke in our skies, the polluters of the highways must now pay the price and be regulated," he said.

He repeatedly emphasized the point that those supporting the ordinance were not favoring the end of billboard use but asking for controls, and was joined in that statement by representatives of the city's beautification commission and several garden clubs and civic organizations.

But signboard representatives and their attorneys maintain that the ordinance, because of restrictions on height, placement, zoning, lettering size and several other factors, would not regulate but exterminate the business.

R. Gordon Scott, who said he represented the Council of Taxpayers, told the commission that approval of the ordinance without any changes would mean the elimination of "all meaningful signs in Virginia Beach."

He said his group was for reasonable control of signs and recognized that it was necessary in a city such as Virginia Beach.

But there is a danger in restricting the height of signs, Scott said. The ordinance would prohibit signs higher than 24 feet.

That would mean that drivers might have to crane their necks to see signs near tall trees and shrubs, causing a traffic hazard, he said.

"If you adopt this ordinance, you will limit the effective use

Radio Club Tests Communications Network

The Virginia Beach Amateur Radio Club (Hams) participated in a nationwide "Simulated Emergency Test" (SET) on Saturday, Feb. 3. The test was sponsored by the American Radio Relay League, a nationwide organization of hams. The League has set up an emergency network for radio communications between all points of the United States and Canada in the event other means of communication are not available. Periodic tests are held to maintain the dependability of the system and it was one of these tests that INSIGHT attended Saturday.

In an emergency situation a message may originate in a local ham radio unit and be relayed to California or any other part of the country, including Alaska and Hawaii, or to Canada. The message would be copied in writing by the local dispatcher and passed to the long distance dispatcher who would pass it on to an area or state station who would in turn pass it on to Atlantic Region Headquarters. It would then be forwarded to the National Headquarters. Station to the local dispatcher and to its destination. This can be an invaluable service to someone awaiting word from a loved one caught in a disaster area.

Next time you see an extra antenna or two on the car ahead don't think that he's just some wise guy trying to play policeman. He's probably a ham who takes his hobby seriously. Many have taken it so seriously that we owe much of the successful present radio and television transmission quality to them.

SHERM HAWLEY, KIDCS, manned the local dispatchers desk and kept in touch with mobile units in various parts of the Tidewater area, as far south as Kill Devil Hills, N.C., from communication headquarters on Plaza Trail in Windsor Woods.

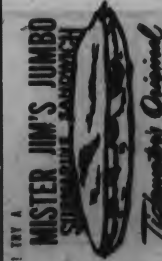

BILL HOLLAND, WAEUL, and BOB JENNINGS, WAKIT, are shown using one of several transmitters in the "long distance room."

FRED BACON, WBALC, and WALLACE BURKETT, WANQT, plotted the location of mobile units on the large map in the "local" room.

Y TEENS REDECORATE YOUTH ACTIVITIES CENTER

The Youth Activities Center on Pinewood Drive is getting a face lift. The Virginia-Camacho are working on Wednesday and also have the building redecorated so they are painting and redecorating the inside of the building. Boy Scouts use the building two nites a week so they are cleaning and fixing up outside the building. The project was started last summer and 1 Teen Program Director, JAYNE JACKSON, feels more painting sessions will finish the inside. JAYNE discussed the paint making with SUE TROUTMAN.

Teamwork is needed when you're painting both sides of a ditch door and using one paint can. AMELIA DREWRY paints the left side and ROBIN MARINELLI the right.

Trimming around the windows is one of the worst jobs in painting but CHERYL JANIK goes about it cheerfully as DODY SIMS uses a roller on the walls.

LAURA GARNSWORTHY, SUSAN COLEMAN and BETH COFFIN teamed up to paint the large fireplace.

BETH JONES and AMY MARTIN painted chairs.

MARGARET MARINELLI gets a big laugh out of the almost empty roller pan which PAT HARDY hands her to paint the wall. All paint and materials have been donated by local merchants. The paint has now run out and there is a need for more white. Anyone wishing to donate paint or furnishings for the building may call JAYNE JACKSON at 340-3131.

Hospital's third floor nears completion.

Already A Need For More Hospital Beds

The third floor of Virginia Beach General Hospital will not be completed until June and already the hospital's board of directors see the need for the fourth floor.

President Hunter C. Phelan told the board at its recent annual meeting that the third floor would provide 87 new medical and surgical beds. But simultaneously the annex on 25th Street, which houses an average of about 30 patients, will be closed, so the new construction will accommodate only 57 more patients.

"We must plan to finish the fourth floor because a year or more will be required to complete it," Phelan said.

He reported that a total of $421,326 had been collected of the 1968-69 bond issue in the most recent fund raising campaign. Phelan also noted that last year's hospital admission were 9.1 per cent higher than the preceding year and that total patient days of care rose 20.1 per cent over 1969.

During the meeting Phelan, who has seen the hospital through its opening in 1965,

Eisenhower Assigned

Officials at Dam Neck naval installation say they have not yet received full details on the assignment of David Eisenhower for training at the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center.

The White House has announced the 22-year-old grandson of the former president is scheduled to arrive at the Virginia Beach installation on March 22nd for an eight-week training program.

Officials said Eisenhower will be commissioned an ensign prior to reporting to Dam Neck, and that he is scheduled for assignment to the guided missile cruiser USS Albany, homeported in Jacksonville, Fla., upon completion of his training.

Waterfield Criticized for Letter

By James Turner

City Councilman Floyd E. Waterfield Jr. has been charged by a fellow councilman with violation of a code provision prohibiting interference by a councilman in personnel matters "if not in fact, then in spirit."

The criticism stemmed from a letter the Pungo Borough representative made public at Monday's session, in which he said an employee being relieved of his duties Feb. 15 was "entitled to a hearing" before council.

Councilman F. Reid Ervin called Waterfield's actions "improper" and said that even in the highest levels of government personnel matters are not made public.

Just prior to the reading of the letter, several other councilmen asked if the matter pertained to a personnel matter, but Waterfield indicated he wanted the letter read before the press.

Waterfield said Wednesday that he didn't think he had violated the code provision but that "if I did, I didn't do it intentionally, I'm not taking up a personnel matter."

Section 4.03 of the City Code states that "Neither the council nor any of its members shall direct the appointment or removal of any person or his removal from any office or employment by the city manager or by his subordinates."

The penalty for such a violation is not specified in the code. The city charter indicates that a penalty for any charter violation not prescribed is 12 months in jail, a $1000 fine, or both.

Waterfield said he wrote the letter about a member of the Community Services staff "because I wanted to tell him where he could go" after an appeal to the city manager's office.

He said he made the matter public because he felt the press should know about the situation. Personnel matters are discussed in closed council sessions so damage won't occur to the individual's reputation.

Ervin said that if the matter were made public, it would ruin the person's reputation and make it very difficult to gain employment elsewhere.

"I am very much concerned with morale at City Hall," Waterfield said, and related that point to recent additions to the city's staff of persons who haven't lived within the city.

"I am saying that here is a man who has been, so far as I know, a loyal and capable employee filling his position for six years and should not be brushed off and thrown to the wind," Waterfield wrote.

He attributed the brushing off to the recent appointment of a key administrative official by the city manager.

"I think we're going out of town in too many cases," he said.

The City Council is charged by the people with governing the city, and although councilmen shouldn't interfere with the city's administrators, "it should know what's going on," Waterfield wrote.

As citizens, he said, city employees have a right to come to councilmen with problems and expect to be heard just like anyone else, adding that he was just doing his job.

City Manager Roger M. Scott said Wednesday afternoon that the individual involved requested and received a hearing on his removal Wednesday morning.

Scott said he would make his decision within the coming week.

Group To Study Problems

Faced with overcrowded schools and the increasing demands of developers for more multi-family housing, the City Council agreed to the formation Monday of a committee to investigate the problems of the city's future growth.

The action stemmed from the recent defeat of an $18.4 million school bond issue and pressures being placed on the council for action toward continued economic and residential growth.

In proposing the committee's creation, Mayor Donald H. Rhodes said he hoped "this committee would direct itself to the question of the type of growth our citizens desire, and what would be in the best interest of our city."

He said that other questions the committee could investigate include comparison of tax rates with neighboring cities, cost of living comparisons, the relative cost of home purchases and various city charter requirements and limitations.

Committee membership would include representatives of the Council of Civic Organizations; the Tidewater Association of Homebuilders; The Chamber of Commerce or the Committee of 100; an attorney from the city's Bar association; the Council of Garden Clubs; the Virginia Beach Development Council; the Council of Parent-Teachers Association; a military representative; the Citizens Against Pollution; the city's innkeepers association; the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors; the Industrial Development Authority; the Building Trades Council and the agricultural community.

Rhodes' proposal was approved on a motion by Councilman George R. Ferrell, but not before other councilmen expressed their displeasure with the committee's creation.

"I vote for it not as a panacea to the problem," said Councilman Robert B. Cromwell Jr., "but because I'm sure it can't hurt."

He said he thought the needs of the people had been made clear with the defeat of the bond issue.

"I don't interpret the defeat of the issue as anything other than a call for a slowdown in the intensity of high density housing," Cromwell said.

The answer to the problem of high density development is not more high density development, he said to applause.

Cromwell was joined by Councilman J. Curtis Payne in his statements, but it was Councilman F. Reid Ervin who attacked the proposal more vigorously.

"Last fall when these people elected us to council they looked to us for leadership and direction," he said. "The council might be shirking its responsibility" if it allows this, Ervin said in the informal session.

But in the formal session, Ervin was even more pointed. He indicated that the committee's formation was politically "expedient" and that it was a means of avoiding the issue of multi-family housing.

"I hold that a clear challenge has been issued by the people," he said, "a challenge recently underscored by the results of the school bond referendum."

"The time is at hand for this city to move ahead. To stagnate would be to die."

He said he could not stop "growth but I will not be a party to growth for growth's sake."

Ervin's response came after Rhodes read a letter from the Chamber of Commerce's Committee of 100, a business oriented group.

Tourism Funds Sought by City

A resolution asking for federal funds for tourist promotion of Virginia Beach was approved by City Council, making it the first Virginia city to do so.

Under the International Travel Act of 1961, the city can apply for matching funds up to 50 per cent from the Federal Government, provided it applies the funds to projects for promotion outside the U.S.

The resolution approved Monday asks that the Virginia Travel Service study the feasibility of appropriating funds to the city so that it can qualify for the grant.

The funds will be used for promotion of the city in Canada, said Tourist Development Coordinator Samuel W. Scott Jr. Scott said that about 900,000 Canadians visit the United States annually, and that the state and Virginia Beach receives a "goodly portion of these travelers."

The state, Scott said, could directly qualify under the act and use an exerted advertising promotion series to draw Canadians to Virginia.

Scott said the financial windfall to tourism came when Congress amended the act in 1970, and raised the funding level from $4 to $15 million.

"We have a golden opportunity to be one of the first," he said, "first, states to take advantage of the amendment," he said. Mayor Donald H. Rhodes agreed, saying that the city would be one of the first to "play this as a possibility for funds."

Under the city's advertising plan, a percentage of the expenditure is already being directed towards the Canadian and Northern United States travel market.

In 1970, the city spent about $14,000 in newspaper advertising and brochures for Canadian consumption.

In the first six months of the 1971, the city expects to spend $10,400 for the same market.

Scholarships Awarded Two

First Colonial High School seniors Tommy Soffield and Clinton Bradshaw have become the first regional high school students to receive full four-year athletic scholarships to Appalachian State University, at Boone, N.C.

Soffield and Bradshaw were officially notified of their achievement Tuesday at the high school by Richard Tickle, Asst. Football Coach at Appalachian, who visited First Colonial for the signing of contracts granting the scholarships.

During their gridiron careers at First Colonial Soffield played offensive and defensive tackle while Bradshaw played fullback.

Tickle said the granting of the scholarships followed his viewing of film clips of both Soffield and Bradshaw in action against competing teams.

Foreign Language Program Is Sunday

Floyd E. Kellam High School will be the scene Sunday of the annual International Tea, sponsored by the Kellam Foreign Language Department.

The program will consist of skits and songs, and an art exhibit with a Spanish theme. German students will present the story of "Snow and the Seven Dwarfs" in German.

French students will present a puppet show which will have a French dialogue.

Spanish students of the third and fourth year levels will present a play entitled "El mudo de Junto al Cielo." First and second year students are having a fashion show to illustrate the developments of Spanish dress over the years. The art exhibit being shown is sponsored by the Kellam Spanish Club.

The skits and presentations will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Kellam Auditorium. They will be followed by a social period in the school cafeteria which will be climaxed with the breaking of a Spanish Pinata. The "Tea" is held annually for the benefit of foreign language students, their parents and teachers, and special guests from Virginia Beach, Norfolk, and Chesapeake.

Student committees organized the event. Students in charge were Debbie Danklefs, general chairman; Melonie Moudot, presentation committee; Sheri McKee, invitations and programs; Claire Eversole, decorations; Barry Bradberry, publicity; Bobby Brown, refreshments; Mary Lewis, technical crew; and the Pinata is furnished by Alex Kutos.

The entire program was planned and put on by Foreign language students from Kellam.

Youths To Audition for Orchestra

Auditions for an area-wide youth symphony orchestra to be sponsored by the Norfolk Symphony Association will be held on Saturday, February 20 at Granby High School.

In his announcement of the auditions, Mayer I. Bransteln, chairman of the Symphony Association's youth orchestra committee, stated that "The persistent dream of our Music Director, Russell Stanger, and of teachers, musicians and scores of interested citizens moved the officials of the Norfolk Symphony Association to work for the formation of an area youth symphony orchestra...an orchestra which would be composed of the most musically talented youth through the college level in the cities in our area—Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach.

"The committee has worked diligently toward this end and has received the pledged cooperation of leaders in the field of music in these neighboring cities.

"We feel that with the leadership of Russell Stanger, who will be Music Director of the youth symphony, the orchestral organization which will be created in a few short months as a result of this collective effort will be one in which we may all take great pride."

Violinist In Concert

The Norfolk Symphony Orchestra will present its fourth Subscription Concert of the season Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Center Theatre. Featured guest artist will be Soviet violinist Igor Oistrakh, who will perform the Sibelius Violin Concerto.

The program, conducted by Russell Stanger, will also include Nielsen's Fifth Symphony, and an overture by Groven, "Hjalmar-Ljord," which is being performed for the first time in the United States at this concert, in conjunction with a musical exchange project between the U.S. and Norway, sponsored by UNESCO.

Youth Will Meet Gov.

A Virginia Beach youth is among four outstanding high school senior science students meeting today with Governor Holton and T. Justin Moore Jr., president of Vepco, in observance of the 124th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Alva Edison.

He is Thomas Hamilton Jr. of Cox High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hamilton. This is the 15th year Vepco has sponsored this youth program during National Electrical Week.

CAPTAIN APPLE JACK

BOTTLED IN BOND 100 PROOF

Virginia Fruit Brandy Dist. Co. North Garden, Va.

This 'Salesman' Is On The Move - Literally

It was pouring down rain Sunday night when a truck pulled up to Cox High School auditorium and three men, despite the downpour, began to unload sets and furniture and props into the school auditorium.

The three were moving the Virginia Beach Little Theatre's show of "Death of a Salesman" from Princess Anne High School, where it had completed its two-performance commitment Saturday night, to Cox where it will be presented this Thursday and Friday.

"You could never pay us to do this," commented one of the men, soaking wet and tired to the bone. And he was right. These three—the show's director Sam Hakim, the sets chairman Fred Smith and Alan Barber, one of the 12 actors—are typical of the group of performers and crew members who have spent untold hours—even much of their Christmas holiday time—in perfecting this challenging Arthur Miller play for the local senior English classes.

It is a "heavy" play but one to which students relate. It deals with the lack of communication between a father and his son and the destruction of the old salesman as he loses grip with reality. It is a highly dramatic presentation and hardly the usual Little Theatre fare, but it was undertaken for the English classes since it has been required reading this year.

Princess Anne and Bayside high schools saw the play Thursday night and Kellam and Kempville took their turn Saturday night. This week-end goes to First Colonial on Thursday and Cox on Friday.

When the school commitments are completed, the cast and crew will take a breather before the opening week-end at Bay Harbour Club February 26-27, followed by performances March 5-6 and March 12-13.

The leads are played by Phil Uhler as Willie Loman, the old salesman headed for self-destruction, and Vi Ragan as his long-suffering wife. The two sons are played by Nick Boke as Biff, the free-spirited one, and Bill Hawkinson as Happy, the son whose values are already beginning to slip.

Ben, Willie's imagined brother, is portrayed by Pete Scoppa; the next door neighbor, Charlie, is Dirk Van Allen; and Bernard, the "naive" son of Charlie, is Fran Peterson. Willie's young boss, Howard, the one who deals the final blow, is played by Foy Shaw, and The Woman, a memory from Willie's past, is Gerry Dennis. Lynne Adams is Jenny, the adult Bernard's Secretary.

In the restaurant scene in the second act the waiter is played by Alan Barber and the two young ladies are portrayed by Jane Scoppa and Linda Peterson.

The show will be presented at 8 p.m. at the high school, and at 8:30 p.m. at the Bay Harbour Club.

PWP Meet at College

Parents Without Partners, Tidewater Chapter, will hold a general meeting Sunday at 8 p.m. in its new meeting place, the Science Building auditorium at Virginia Wesleyan College.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Frederick Ritter who will discuss "A New Trend in Personality Development. A light social will follow.

The group will also hold a Valentine Benefit Dance for its Child's Fund Saturday at the VFW Club at Ocean View from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Prizes for the best dancers and a door prize will be awarded. For further information contact Tom Calderland at 480-3369.

Unique Art Intrigues In Village Gallery Show

Discarded paper cups, stacks of old cardboard boxes, farm machinery in ill-repair—such subjects are hardly appealing to the artistic eye. Unless, of course, they are painted with exceptional depth and intimate detail. They then become unique art subjects, if not their beauty.

A young Norfolk artist, Miss Jacquelyn A. Merritt has taken such subjects, has blown them out of proportion and captured them in stark degrees of black and white to create a truly unusual exhibit of art.

Even though two other members of the Elizabeth City State University Art Department faculty share the exhibit with Miss Merritt at Village Gallery, it is her work that dominates the show. The size of her five untitled oils attract, admittedly, but it is the distortion of the subject matter that tickles the imagination and causes the viewer to study and to ponder.

Dr. de Gregorio's "Mexican Vase".

Two of the large paintings are devoted to paper cups caught in a rubble of trash, more resembling cast-off lampshades than their original form. Two appear to be... well, one could be an enlarged portion of old pipes or plumbing, but more than likely they are both separate views of farm machinery, stored in a barn next season's activity.

The fifth, and this viewer's choice, is of stacks of torn and battered cardboard boxes, obviously awaiting the morning's garbage pick-up. The tears are so realistically created that one is impelled to look closer to see if they are truly painted.

But while Miss Merritt's works are dramatic in their starkness, the works of her co-exhibitors Dan M. Pearce and Dr. Vincent J. de Gregorio, are sensitive and, yes, colorful. The eye detail and expression in Pearce's oil portrait "angelo" and the unique blend of color in his collage "Tribute To A Violet" are quite memorable.

Of Dr. de Gregorio's many fine pieces, this viewer's favorite is "Mexican Vase, with Green Plants and Still-Life Tuli's Bay-Late-Summer Afternoon". The title is a bit overwhelming, perhaps, but the detail work in this lovely oil divides its long title. The thing that really attracts is the background...a landscape scene viewed through a window behind the still life. An outstanding piece of work.

With only three exhibiting artists, the show is, of course, limited. And it is expensive. It is a show that will appeal primarily to the more conventional art lover since most of the works, with the exception of Miss Merritt's paintings, are still lifes, landscapes, cottages, portraits and the like. There are few abstracts or modern art pieces. But the art lover, whether conventional or less restrained, will enjoy Miss Merritt's paintings, for their uniqueness if not for their beauty.

CAP Meets Tues.

Citizens Against Pollution (CAP) will meet Tuesday in the Kirm Memorial Library, Downtown Norfolk.

Speaker will be Dr. Buttery, the Director of Public Health of Portsmouth. He will speak on the controversial topic "Human Ecology: The Population Bomb."

Poet Theye To Perform

Don Theye, local poet, playwright, musician will perform at Pembroke Mall, Saturday, at 1 and 2:30. He will read and sing his own works of informal poetry and music. Post Theye has been compared to Rod McKuen and Robert Frost. Like them he is unpretentious and is engaged in celebrating the plain truths of living, and in adhering to the virtues.

Rhondels In Heart Benefit

Bill Deal and the Rhondels will put on a special Red Fund performance Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Rogue's Gallery. Proceeds from the gate will go to the Tidewater Heart Fund.

Gene Loving, WNOR deejay will emcee. All are contributing time, talent, facilities and proceeds to the fund. Admission is $2.

Terming their group as a Funky-Rock Eight-Man Band, Bill Deal and the Rhondels have spread their popularity from this area up and down the east coast. With ten hits, 2 albums and a new release "19 years", the band brings the local scene recording popularity that has earned it international exposure. Their new south american release "Respectable" hit the top 10 in Mexico recently.

SCOUT-O-RAMA AT DOME

The Princess Anne, Virginia Beach District Boy Scouts fair took place at the Dome last week for their 1971 Scout-O-Rama. The fair was really packed, jam-packed. Even outside the Dome was crowded. RAY ALLMOND and BRIAN MADRON, of Troop 232, rose above the crowd on a tower their troop built.

MR. EARL W. TIMMONS, health and safety committee chairman, points out to HUGH LEVESQUE where his Explorer Post 440 would set up its first aid station if an area wide emergency should arise.

Cub Scouts of Den 1, Pack 67, from the Naval Amphibious Base, exhibited "Indian Crafts". JIMMY O'SULLIVAN 4 1/2, stop by to watch as DAVID DUMAS, KURT STECHMANN and LEE THOMPSON worked.

KIRK WOOD and JIMMY JESSUP of Troop 378, wore masks to emphasize the theme of their booth - "anti-pollution".

These boys of Pack 435, Den 1, STEVE DRESSLER and MARK SUMMERELL, show some of the papercraft which Den Mother MRS. PATRICIA DRESSLER has taught them.

RAY HIGGINS, Troop 66, borrowed his father's sextant to help his troop in its booth on astronomy and how we use the sun and stars for navigation.

DONNA HURTUBISE, daughter of MR. and MRS. ARTHUR C. HURTUBISE of Pembroke Manor, is employed by the Trane Company on Pennsylvania Avenue. DONNA's boss is MR. D. R. DAMUTH, Manager Norfolk Sales District.

FIRST COLONIAL HIGH SCHOOL

PHYLLIS SAWYER, daughter of MR. and MRS. EDWARD H. SAWYER of London Bridge, is very happy in her work at the Lomas & Nettleton Company on Pacific Avenue where she works for MRS. JULIE CYR. Apparently MRS. CYR and the company are happy also with PHYLLIS as they have offered her a permanent job and she expects to stay on full time after graduation. This is good illustration of how the young ladies in the program receive good training in office work and the company gains a well trained and valuable employee. There are many other students available to work under this program if jobs can be found for them.

COX HIGH SCHOOL

KAY CARROLL, daughter of MR. and MRS. GRADY W. CARROLL of Lynnhaven Colony, works for MRS. RONALD MORRISON at Luke Construction Company on Edwin Drive. When this picture was taken Thursday she was making up the payroll. The young ladies working under this office training program are given responsible duties and have been found to be capable and dependable employees.

KELLAM HIGH SCHOOL

JOAN DAVIS, daughter of MR. and MRS. WILLIAM H. DAVIS of Back Bay, works in the office of Inspection and Permits for MR. JOHN E. GIBBS. She's been there since November and enjoys the work very much. JOAN hopes to continue working for the City of Virginia Beach after graduation.

KEMPSVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

BARBARA COBB of Kempsville, daughter of MR. and MRS. JOHN H. COBB, JR., has been employed in the law offices of Milus, Hicks & Cherryman on Independence

Boulevard since September and enjoys her work very much. Here she takes dictation from MR. REXFORD R. CHERRYMAN.

PRINCESS ANNE HIGH SCHOOL

SPORTS IN REVIEW

Wareing No. 1

Mike Wareing of First Colonial High is ranked #1 by the latest Virginia-Pilot Wrestling rankings. Wareing, who wrestles at 155, is undefeated thru 10 matches. The 5'7" junior has gained his strength and experience by working out daily in his father's gym. Wareing also played halfback on the football team, scoring 3 touchdowns and 4 two-point conversions for the Patriots.

Comets Fall

Patriots defeat Granby's Comets, 81-65. Ricky Malone scored 24 points in leading First Colonial to an 81-65 victory over Granby. In a game played at the Comet gym, the Patriots led by one at the half 33-32, but got the fast break going in the last two periods to settle the issue. The Patriots had 4 men in double figures. Clint Wilson had 15, Ricky Malone 24, Jesse Joyner 15, and Bo Killen 16.

Falcons out Gunned

Patriots victorious over Falcons. First Colonial crushed Cox, 22-9 in the first quarter, and went on to take a 71-55 victory from the Falcons. It was the first time the Patriots have beaten Cox on their own basketball court. The Patriots were turned-back, 49-45, in the District game 2 years ago. Earlier in the year First Colonial romped to an easy 85-56 victory over Cox. A packed house of 1,200 saw the Patriots beat the Falcons with another great balanced attack. Ricky Malone led the attack with 19, Tom Couch had 18, Clinton Wilson 13, and Jesse Joyner 12.

Let's Have a Ball

"Celebrate, celebrate, dance to the music" of Soul Explosion and Headstone Circus at the Mid-Winter Ball. The occasion will be held in the gymnasium on February 13, at 8:30 p.m. The dress is, of course, elegantly semi-formal. You may receive advanced tickets for the price of $2.00 per couple or purchase them at the door for $2.50 per couple.

A tiny insect with a lion-sized appetite called the aphid lion is now dining on pests that cause millions of dollars of damage each year to cotton and tobacco in the U.S., reports the February SCIENCE DIGEST. The development of an artificial insect egg to feed the larvae enabled scientists to raise enough of the aphid lions to challenge cotton and tobacco pests. Object: biological substitutes for the chemical pesticides that have created environmental hazards.

Bookers Edged

Before a packed house at First Colonial, the Bookers of Booker T. Washington put all of their power into the 4th quarter to come from behind and defeat First Colonial, 66-65. It was a disappointing defeat for the Patriots, who led almost the entire game up until late in the 4th quarter. With about two minutes remaining, Booker T. creased their margin to 66-59. First Colonial tried a last second rally, but the buzzer ran out. The key to the Booker victory had to be their fine control of both offensive and defensive boards, out rebounding F. C., 57-29. The Patriots had two men over the 20-point plateau, Tom Couch had 21, Ricky Malone had 22, Bo Killen contributed 14 in the cause.

Close One

Clinton Wilson fired a 3-point play with just 8 seconds left to play to lift First Colonial to 75-74 victory over Lake Taylor in a Eastern-District game played at the Titan's gym. The Patriots took a 4-point lead at the half, 39-35, but overcame a 5-point deficit going into the 4th quarter before Wilson secured the victory. Balanced scoring again by F. C. led to the victory. Bo Killen scored 22 points, Tom Couch and Jesse Joyner both netted 15, and Clint Wilson added 11 in the effort.

P.A. Slaughtered

Quoting Princess Anne coach Leo Anthony as saying "Nobody is going to blow us out of the gym", the First Colonial Patriots DID JUST THAT last Friday night in an 86-50 romping of the Cavaliers. Princess Anne, hurling to 11 victories without a loss, ran head-on into a fired-up Patriot team, before a turnaway crowd of 2,000 at the Patriot gym. Senior playmaker, Bo Killen, as usual, was just fantastic. Hampered by a severe sore throat, the 6'3" senior scored 23 points and hauled down 18 rebounds. Killen was also outstanding on defense, holding Rudy Tucker of Princess Anne to just one point the entire game. The Patriots were just too much for the Cavaliers in every aspect. Killen took the taller Cavaliers on the boards, while Jesse Joyner, Tom Couch, and Clint Wilson were deadly on the fast break. The First Colonial bench even outplayed the Cavaliers when starters Tom Couch, Clint Wilson, and Bo Killen got into early foul trouble.

In scoring for First Colonial, Bo Killen lead all men with 23, Clint Wilson 18, Ricky Malone 12, and Tom Couch 11. Relief play-makers Mike Branch, Robert Giffin, and Chuck Zausig, as well as the First Colonial faithful with the usual cheers, teamed up to give the Cavaliers a taste of their own medicine. Even if the Patriots never again beat the Cavaliers on the basketball court, this game has to be one of those not-to-be-forgotten and certainly the sweetest victory ever for First Colonial over Princess Anne.

Death of a Salesman

What is tragic about the death of salesman, Willie Lomon? Does his name, Lomon control his destiny? Why can't he see the real world he has created—or has the world created Willie? Does Lucy, his sweet wife, help or harm Willie? And Biff, his son, is he a "chip off the old block" and doomed to the same death? Or can he survive the pressures of self-realization? See "Death of a Salesman" at Cox High, Thursday—curtain at 8 p.m. Get tickets from English teachers. Parents are welcome!

F.B.L. Discussion

The First Colonial Chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America presented a panel discussion on Tuesday, February 2, in the school library. All students were invited to attend this panel discussion on careers in the business field and the further education necessary for entrance into these careers. The panel consisted of: Mrs. Hilda Garrett, Secretary, Norfolk Federal Savings and Loans. Mrs. Ruth Saunders, Director of Princess Anne Business College. Miss Sheila Dudley, Secretary, Virginia National Bank. Mrs. Judy Scharle, Coordinator of the cooperative Office Education Program at Kellam High School. Miss Louise Whitehurst, Secretary, Regional Office of Virginia Education Association. Linda Neale was moderator of the panel discussion. The program was planned by Janet Hill.

Washington Bound

Joanne Delaney and Mike Saunders were chosen to go to Washington for a Presidential Classroom, on the basis of their work in all classes, desire to learn, personality, and ability to relate what they learn to others. They will be going in February to study the executive, judicial, and legislative branches of government. They will be with senators from fifty states to attend lectures, seminars, and meetings. The school is providing the financing of $200.00 per student. The purpose of the Secondary High School program of A Presidential Classroom for Young Americans is to give American high school seniors an opportunity to study, in depth, the intricacies of the U.S. Government in Wash., D.C.; to enlighten these seniors, through personal involvement and contact by showing them what government is doing in various fields; to humanize government by having the students spend time with the people who are government; and to encourage dedication to and understanding of the American system, which all too often seems remote, bureaucratic, and inaccessible to today's young people.

Exchange Student

Markku Seuri is First Colonial's foreign exchange student. He is sponsored by the Interact Club, a service club that cooperates with Rotary International. All the club's money-making projects are to help pay for Markku. One service the Interact Club has done for F. C. was to clean up the sports field after homecoming. They did this after the student body created the mess and failed to clean it up. Another service is the sale of student directories. They will be coming out within the next two weeks. The club, sponsored by Mr. Charles Pugh, is led by President Robert Ford. Other officers are: Kurt Schult, Vice President; John Georgiou, Secretary; and Ronnie Van Voorhis, Treasurer. The club also has a member in the State Interact; Lieutenant Governor Paul Pokorski.

Girl Scouts Entertain at Hope Haven

Members of Girl Scout Troop 551 travelled from Norfolk to the Hope Haven Children's Home, on North Landing Road in Virginia Beach, last Saturday afternoon to entertain children of the home with the presentation of a puppet show.

The script, "Snow White and The Seven Hippies", was an original production which while based on the legendary story was told in the language of the modern day teenager. Members of the troop collaborated in writing the script, making the hand puppets, designing sets and constructing the stage, and in the serving of home made cookies after the program.

Mrs. Harleen Hansen, program director (left), lends a hand in supporting the stage as the puppets portray their movements of the script being read by Scout Linda Kramer (right), who acted as narrator.

Adult workers joined youngsters of the Hope Haven Children's Home, and girls of Scout Troop 551, in viewing the private showing of a puppet show at the home.

The Bayside Junior Woman's Club recently chose, as a community improvement project, to work for the prevention of the spread of venereal disease. At its regular monthly meeting, held last week at Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan building on Independence Boulevard, the club presented four speakers on the subject of venereal diseases. MRS. BOBBIE MAJETTE, program chairman, and MRS. LOUANNA BARE, president, chat before the meeting with MR. JACK MARINO, epidemiologist of the Norfolk Public Health Department.

A mother is always proud of her son but there was none prouder at Oceana Friday as MRS. JAMES S. SPELL planned the Good Conduct Medal on her son, YN2 JAMES M. SPELL, as his father watched. The occasion was the presentation of ten awards by CAPTAIN WILLIAM B. BARROW, Commander, Fleet Air Norfolk. Awards were presented as follows: Capt. John E. Ford, Meritorious Service Medal; LCDR. J. A. Bates, Jr., Navy Achievement Medal; LCDR. S. R. Peake, Navy Commendation Medal; LCDR. J. S. Bricker, Vietnamese Medal; Stanley S. Howard, Meritorious Civilian Service Certificate; RM1 L. W. YWCA executive

Give her a challenge, and you have a friend

Mrs. Lois Harper-busy at her YWCA desk in the Princess Theatre Building.

By Helen Crist

It's as natural for Mrs. John N. (Lois) Harper to think in terms of organization and promotion as it is for sweethearts to send valentines.

Lois Harper is executive of the YWCA of Tidewater area, with staff responsibilities for public relations of the Metropolitan Association.

She came here from Boulder Colo. where she held a similar position, to fill the spot left vacant when Mrs. John Frost retired in September.

Adept in the art of administration and community relations, she says she is well pleased with the role of the Y in this area.

But she has many plans to inaugurate.

"Let's have a forum on Women in Practical Politics," she says. "That's been so successful in other areas."

She finds especially gratifying the coordination of Child and Family Service with the Y, to sponsor family life educational programs in the schools. Also, she's impressed with the teenagers, and their service programs.

And no matter what new ideas Lois Harper promotes, she's had the experience to put them across. She's been directing community relations, fund-raising, exercising organizational talent since her University of Pittsburgh days, where she majored in psychology.

A typical example is the 52-hour telethon that she masterminded in 1954 in her home town of Pittsburgh.

"We had to raise $350,000 to put station WQED on the air," she said. The telethon kicked off the campaign.

"And we did it—it was the first educational station in the country."

At one point in her career, in 1966, Lois Harper was executive director of the National Committee on Household Employment in Washington, D.C.

"This committee was the result of a report on the status of women which indicated a need to upgrade the dignity of domestics."

"We took underprivileged people and taught them the art of homemaking and gave them pride in their work."

The program involved fund-raising and entailed much traveling.

Funds were slow to materialize when Lois undertook an eight-month negotiation with the Ford Foundation. The net result was that Ford agreed to help underwrite the program, thus assuring its success.

A homemaker, herself, Lois has been a widow for nine years. Her son, Jere, a Naval Academy graduate, and his wife live in New Brunswick. They'll be visiting this weekend, at the Plaza Apartments where Lois lives.

And if it were summertime, no doubt they'd get in a little fishing, for this is a particular hobby with Lois, along with bridge and golf.

She's a Kappa Alpha Theta, and has just affiliated with the Beach chapter.

But there isn't much time, now, for activities other than work, which she says, is really her hobby too.

"I thoroughly enjoy Y work, and this is where I want to stay."

But it was in Washington, D.C., where she was public relations director of the National Capitol area, that her finesse in dealing with the public was sorely tested.

In her position, Lois played a major role in putting across the International Food Fair, an elaborate event to benefit World Fellowship.

It required, among other things, organizing embassy wives, who then set up booths in the Mayflower Hotel, filled to the brim with home-cooked food of their native countries.

A five-hour affair, it was extremely elegant, with children in native costumes, music and fashion shows.

Lois took this under her wing for three years.

"And my, was it competitive," she said.

"One year, the French were devastated when they cleared only $2,200 and the Germans beat them out with $3,600. Then along came the Australians with profits of $8,000 and the Germans nearly collapsed."

Partly it was competitive for monetary reasons, for a percentage of the profit went directly to the individual countries, as well as to World Fellowship.

Each year the fair had a theme. One such was "Breads of the World." For this, the Washington Post gave them a full color spread.

And when Woman's Day magazine gave Lois and a free lance writing collaborator 18 pages prior to the event, the gross take of the fair, normally around $18,000 was that year, $31,000.

"Which proves the value of publicity," Lois says.

And which, incidentally, very nearly proved the undoing of Lois Harper.

It occurred when publicity shots were being arranged with the Washington Evening Star.

"The paper was terribly interested in the fair, so they confirmed in writing, an appointment at a designated time, stating that the photographer would be waiting."

Participating was the Turkish ambassador's wife, among others. She was eager to reproduce an antique Turkish candy store she'd seen in an ancient art book. Which she did, there in the ballroom of the hotel.

Everything was ready—the children in colorful costumes, Madame quite elegant, the ballroom alive with excitement.

Came the appointed time, and past the time...and no photographer arrived.

"Madame became fidgety, because it was now 4:15 and she was due at a cocktail party at 5, which necessitated a change of dress."

"We were all cooling our heels and I kept calling the paper. They couldn't find any assignment and there was no one around to send."

"I told them to get someone out, anyone, before we had an international incident."

Finally, after one hour and a half, a photographer strolled in.

The pictures were taken, but Madame was furious.

But the payoff came the next day, when a friend called Lois.

"Lois," she said, "didn't you say that publicity was going to be a big bread in Sunday's paper?"

"Yes," I shouted, reaching for the evening paper.

"And there, much to my horror, on the women's page, was a picture of Madame, taken, it's true at the food fair. But underneath, the caption read: 'The Turkish ambassador's wife previews the Junior League Christmas Shop.'"

Only profuse, profound, and humble apologies from the editor placated Madame, who remained, nonetheless, quite frozen.

Do you progress in your thinking-?

By Rev. Joyce Kramer

True nobility lies, not in being superior to some other person, but in being superior to your previous self.

Have you progressed in your thinking within the last year? Are you experiencing new insight and understanding? What about your attitudes toward yourself, people, and life? Are they still the same, or are they superior to what they used to be? Are you so predictable in your habits of conversation as well as actions that your family and friends know exactly what to expect? How monotonous!

Stagnation of your mind is as deadly to your life as stagnant water is to your body. Life is for growth and progress.

Seek understanding that you might grow out of false beliefs, prejudice, limited beliefs about God, others, yourself and life. Move into more unlimited thinking and living and you will become superior to your previous self.

MY MIND AND HEART IS OPEN AND RECEPTIVE TO NEW UNDERSTANDING.

Junior Woman's Club presents Drs. Schlegel

By Howard Swindle

Theoretically, Communism should work, but doesn't. Capitalism, on the other hand, doesn't look as if it should work, but does.

According to Dr. Dorothy Schlegel, a basic selfishness in people is the major stumbling block the Communist system. Dr. Schlegel's remarks, based on a tour of Russia, came during a meeting of the Virginia Beach-Princess Anne Junior Woman's Club Tuesday night.

Dr. Schlegel and her husband, Dr. Marvin Schlegel, discussed Communism briefly before presenting slides of their tour through Russia. The Schlegels are residents of Virginia Beach and members of the Norfolk State College faculty. "People actually don't want to share," Dr. Schlegel said. She attempted to portray Communism from the woman's viewpoint.

She said a Russian maid at their hotel became excited over things Americans consider ordinary, such as colored yarn. The couple's car, old and inexpensive by American standards, was a "traffic stopper" during their auto tour through Russia, she said.

"There were no ghosts we knew them, but no one had luxuries," she said. Dr. Schlegel said her feelings of fear and hostility were replaced by a sincere feeling of pity by the tours end.

The Schlegels' discussion and slides were presented by the International Affairs Department of the club.

Mrs. Mamie Boone, 76, has been adopted.

Since Thanksgiving, she's been the pet of the Ekoleia Camp Fire group, all fifth-graders at Aragona Elementary School.

Mrs. Boone lives at Dam Neck and has no children of her own.

It was Thanksgiving, when the likeable youngsters were searching for someone in need of a helping hand.

"A visiting nurse suggested Mrs. Boone," Mrs. Ronald Francis, group guardian said.

So the girls took her food and clothing and in the process they fell in love with her, and she with them.

When Christmas arrived, they bought and trimmed a tree for her, they brought gifts and what's more...a refrigerator.

"Mrs. Boone hadn't had one for five years," they said.

"When those children came in I just cried and prayed and thanked the Lord," Mrs. Boone said. "People said before they'd come over and help but they never did."

With Valentine's Day in the offing, and Mrs. Boone just coming out of a short period in the hospital, the girls gave her an early "home-from-the-hospital-Valentine surprise party."

They laboriously cut out fancy valentines, trimmed them with lace and wrote on them, "I love you."

Then Mrs. Shelby Mumpower, assistant guardian, drove Mrs. Boone to the party at Mrs. Francis' home, 372 Jacqueline Ave.

There was a heart-shaped cake and red punch and a healthy yellow-blooming chrysanthemum plant that the Ekoleias bought with pennies saved.

There were tears in Mrs. Boone's eyes.

"These beautiful children do more for me than if I had born them myself into this world."

YWCA News

Arts and crafts make hit with club

Tuesday...bright, crisp, snappy day.

Made to order for the Princess Anne Woman's Club meeting...noise and chatter aplenty, in the Scott Memorial Methodist Church social hall.

President Grace Duval busy with the gavel...Dr. W. A. Dickinson giving the woman a run-down on the great good their money will do for the cardiovascular center and research program at Norfolk General Hospital.

He quips: "I've been out in the kitchen checking the menu. Watch that cholesterol."

Arts and crafts and the member's own handwork exhibited and judged...talent galore, the judging difficult.

A hearty luncheon...Grace Duval raps again: "Ladies—let's refrain from talking so much and eat a little faster and we can all get over to the craft tables and see who won the ribbons."

Mrs. Frantz
Sandra Hewitt bride of Robert Frantz

Miss Sandra R. Hewitt became the bride of Robert Frantz Dec. 27 at the Chapel of the Virginia Beach Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Hewitt, Jr. of the Beach. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Frantz, of White-stone, N.Y.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. R. Ormand Bryant.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the gown her mother wore on her wedding day. She carried a French bridal bouquet of pink roses encircled by red roses centered with a white orchid. Her mantilla of ivory illusion was made and designed by the bride.

Ushers were Robert R. Hewitt, III, brother of the bride; R. V. Johnson, III, of Portsmouth, cousin of the bride. Mrs. F. Curtis Johnson, maternal aunt, of Suffolk, was mistress of ceremonies.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the church social hall.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Linwood Beaton, of Suffolk, and the late Mr. Beaton. Her paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Hewitt, of Shelby, N.C.

The couple will live in White-stone, N.Y.

Senior citizens organize

A general invitation has been extended to all senior citizens (55 plus) of Virginia Beach to attend an organizing meeting at St. Nicholas Church, Little Neck Road, February 12 at 10:30 a.m. Discussion of possible locations and programs for a Senior Citizens' Center in the city will highlight the meeting. Other services such as discount rates on prescriptions and other merchandise will also be discussed.

The meeting is non-denominational and is open to all interested persons. Those in need of transportation may call Sister Anne at 486-1610. Refreshments will be served.

Colonel Louis White (USA Ret) is chairman of the Ad Hoc Steering Committee that has planned the meeting. Serving with Colonel White are: Mrs. Elbert D. Cox, Mrs. Lois Harper, Mrs. Thomas Mancini, Mrs. John J. Gill and Mrs. Phillip Russo. Mrs. Russo and Mrs. Harper represent the Virginia Beach Branch of the YWCA of the Tidewater Area which is assisting with the coordinating effort.

Women's Club hears Rev. Woodward

The Princess Anne Business and Professional Women's Club heard the Rev. Richard Woodward speak at the Thunderbird Motor Lodge Monday evening.

Rev. Woodward's exposition of personal fulfillment as set forth in the 23rd Psalm was most effective.

After graduation from college and Theological Seminary, Rev. Woodward worked in the social field for a number of years.

Later he applied his varied experiences, his talents, abilities, and skills toward the founding of the Community Chapel, an interdenominational church, on Laskin Road.

Mrs. Irene Mulwee, personal development chairman, presented the program.

This is all that remained after fire destroyed Kala Church of Christ.

Ancient Church Is Destroyed by Fire

An investigation continues into the cause of a fire which last Thursday destroyed the Kala Church of Christ in the remote Creeds section of the resort city.

The original structure, which has served the congregation since 1890, along with several additions including a new modern edifice, were reduced to rubble despite efforts of firemen to extinguish the flames.

Rev. John E. Allgood said he and his wife were in the parsonage, located about 15 feet from the rear of the church, when Mrs. Allgood saw smoke coming from the building around the caves eaves of the roof.

Rev. Allgood said he rushed into the church and saw flames near the furnace room which suddenly spread into the auditorium, broke through the roof, then rapidly spread through the entire building.

Records show the alarm was sounded at 9:25 a.m. with the first firefighting units arriving at the scene at 9:29 a.m. Within minutes volunteer firemen from the Creeds, Blackwater, Princess Anne Courthouse and Knotts Island fire departments arrived at the church. The last of these units left the scene at 12:36 p.m. after spending more than three hours in efforts to control and extinguish the blaze.

Construction on the new addition of the church had neared completion and plans had already been made for a two-day dedication of the church March 13 and 14 at the Morris Neck and Fittstown Road site. Estimates have placed the total loss in the fire between $100,000 and $125,000.

Two Are Cleared

William H. Sanderlin and Phillip G. Roberson, Jr., were cleared in Municipal Court Monday of charges filed against them in connection with a series of burglaries in the resort city.

Sanderlin, 18, of Bowden Avenue, and Roberson, 18, of Harbor Lane, had been arrested in connection with the reported burglarizing of five private homes and 10 business firms. The burglaries resulted in the loss of an estimated $20,000 worth of personal belongings, household items, power tools, and guns and ammunition.

In Vietnam

Lieutenant Commander James E. Hancock, whose wife lives in Virginia Beach, has reported here for a 12-month tour of duty in the Republic of Vietnam.

He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1960, and is now serving in Saigon on the staff of the commander of U.S. Naval Forces in Vietnam.

The next set of extramurals will be held in March and will include the activities taught during the third unit. These locations and date will be announced later.

Postmaster J. T. Crosswhite (seated right) joins leaders of various postal employee labor organizations for a briefing on fundamentals of a new blood donor program by Red Cross representative Forest Price (standing left).

Blood Program Started

Virginia Beach postal employees last Friday joined a National Blood Donor Program designed to replenish the dwindling supplies of blood on hand in blood banks which might be required in the event of emergencies.

The program was launched in Virginia Beach through a meeting with local Red Cross representative Forest Price, Postmaster J. T. Crosswhite, Jr., and officials of local postal labor organizations to formulate plans.

These labor organization leaders, and their respective groups, included D. S. Nichols, NALC; N. R. Cidevicz, NAPS; R.E. Parsons, NASIM; E. J. Bohenstiel, NAPOMH; and R. W. Heim, UPPOC.

In launching the program, Crosswhite noted that Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has pointed out the important role postal employees play on the local level in support of the blood donor program. While urging those able to do so to participate in the program, Crosswhite also praised postal employees for the continuing support of such campaign over many years.

Arrest Made In Market Robbery

Officer G. D. Roland, 2nd Police Precinct, has been credited with the rapid apprehension of a suspect last Friday afternoon within minutes of the armed robbery of the Seaside Market, at 23rd Street and Pacific Avenue.

The suspect was identified by officials as Ronnie Lee Allen, 25, of 15th Street, Virginia Beach.

Roland apprehended Allen at 21st Street and Baltic Avenue, a few blocks from the robbery scene.

Investigators quoted a clerk with saying two men approached the counter and inquired about the price of a pack of cigarettes. One of the men suddenly displayed a handgun and demanded money. Both men fled the store on foot after obtaining approximately $300.

Although a number of customers were in the store and employees were on duty at the check out counters, the robbery was reportedly pulled off with such deftness that only the victim was aware of it.

Allen has been placed under $3,500 bond pending further legal proceedings scheduled for March 5th in Municipal Court. Police continue their search for the second suspect.

Sailor of Month

Sailor of the Month for Naval Air Station Oceana is Aviation Fire Control Technician Thomas W. Paterson of Attack Squadron Thirty-Five (VA-35). He was nominated for his work while temporarily assigned to the Aviation Maintenance Department where he worked on the Track MATC, a Module Test Console Device used in radar repair. The console sets up test situations for the radar so that they may be checked for defects.

Before joining the Navy, Paterson was a student at the University of Bridgeport, Conn. where he majored in Industrial Design. "Industrial design, Paterson and his wife, Nancy, live in Virginia Beach. Nancy is a graduate in elementary education of Trenton State Teachers College is currently employed as a credit interviewer by a local department store. Following Paterson's enlistment, the couple plans to return to Bridgeport where he will complete his B.S. in Industrial Design.

Two Charged In Robbery

Police officials say they arrested Joseph E. Kennedy and Steven L. Arnold Tuesday night and charged them with the strong armed robbery of Francis H. Clark.

Investigators quote Clark, 42, of 24th Street, with saying two men attempted to borrow money from him and when he refused they took $60 from him under threats of bodily harm.

Kennedy, 19, of 24th Street, and Arnold, 19, of 66th Street, were reportedly arrested shortly after the crime was committed.

Announce VA Costs

The Veterans Administration has announced that estimated expenditures for Virginia for fiscal 1970 totaled $203.7 million of which $3,663,783 was for Virginia Beach.

The Director of the Rappahannock VA Regional Office said that the bulk of the money was $120.2 million in disability compensation and pension payments for Virginia veterans--$2,759,558 for Virginia Beach veterans.

Other VA expenditures in this city for fiscal 70 were $463,167 for GI Bill and other VA education programs, and $430,998 for insurance and indemnities.

In announcing these figures, VA invited veterans to contact the VA Regional Office at 211 West Campbell Avenue, Roanoke, Virginia, for information on any program, including the GI Bill.

Rescue Is Recognized

Virginia Beach City Council honored Sgt. N. M. Bordner, Jr., for his recent rescue of a 12-year-old boy from the ice covered waters of Lake Holly. Bordner, attached to 2nd Police Precinct, was awarded a citation which read in part that he "disregarded his own life and safety by plunging into the frozen waters" in the rescue of young Edgar Suggs. Mayor Donald H. Rhodes presents Bordner with the citation as Police Chief Col. W. W. Davis and City Manager Roger M. Scott reflect their approving admiration. (Photo by Robert Gale, Police Central Services Division).

Telephone Controversy Probably Court-Bound

By Howard Swindle

Both sides in the Back Bay telephone controversy met to resolve their problems, but when the verbal smoke cleared last week in rural Creeds School auditorium the battle lines remained unchanged.

A vice president of the Continental System in Virginia tried to defend subsidiary First Colony Telephone Co.'s service in Back Bay, but, more often than not, his explanations met only with jeers and vocal disbelief.

Conrad J. Logan, chief executive for Continental's holdings in the state, told more than 200 Pungo-Princess Anne Borough subscribers, "Our company is a victim of inflation, high costs of various types and the fact that this is a rural and scattered area only increases our operating costs."

Logan, who came from Emporia for the meeting, added frankly, "I can't hold out to you any idea that we can reduce these rates."

Logan, First Colony manager Bob Turner and other telephone officials attended the Back Bay Civic League meeting at the request of members who have banded together to fight what they feel are exorbitant rates and poor service. The meeting was the second called by the newly formed civic league, created solely to fight First Colony Telephone Co.

Since the first meeting, however, the league has received backing from the Virginia Beach City Council which appropriated $5,000 to appeal the recent State Corporation Commission (SCC) ruling which allowed the rate increase by First Colony.

Logan, interrupted frequently by bursts from the irate crowd, said First Colony is making strides to improve telephone service to the 1,500 subscribers in Back Bay. He said the company has installed 30 private-line phones in the last week. "And we have facilities to work another 12," he said. The company said it received 88 requests in the last two weeks for private lines.

Previously, many Back Bay residents said they had been refused private lines. Logan said the lack of one-party lines in certain areas is a "misunderstanding" and said, "The reason they weren't offered is because of an unwillingness to pay for them." The Continental vice president said he anticipated "minor telephone construction" in the Back Bay area within the next 30 days and added, "We'll do our very best to provide good service and we'll try to do it promptly."

Logan admitted, however, that he wasn't satisfied with the tape recording method of handling telephone complaints and promised "something will be done in the future." Many subscribers have leveled blasts at the tape recordings, asked for an operator to handle service requests and reports of phone outages.

After hearing several complaints from the audience, Logan told the crowd, "Service here is substantially better than some of the other (other companies)." He pointed to the four-party lines in Pungo and Princess Anne (Pungo has no more than four parties on a single line—that's not true in other parts of Virginia") and toll-free calls to the Tidewater area ("850 circuits to Norfolk to permit customers to call Norfolk free.")

Logan accused Back Bay residents of blaming the telephone company for many services they feel they are entitled to as residents of the city of Virginia Beach but aren't getting because of the rural composition of the area.

Though legally the Virginia Beach city limits encompass the farms in the Back Bay area, he said, residents of the area don't have sewage, water and many other improvements that are available to Back Bay residents in more heavily populated areas.

More than $374,000 has been spent in the last three years by First Colony in the Princess Anne-Pungo area, Logan said. "This year we anticipate another $250,000 to be spent," he said.

In answer to a question from the audience, Logan admitted he knew of no area in Virginia that had higher phone rates than the Back Bay area.

Meanwhile, the civic league continued plans to take Continental, the third largest telephone company in the U. S., to task in court. In addition to City Attorney Dale Binson, attorney A. Joseph Canada also will work to appeal the SCC's October ruling allowing rates which, in some cases, amounted to increases of 75 per cent for subscribers.

Canada will meet with Back Bay residents February 26 at Creeds to assemble specific complaints and lay groundwork for the appeal. He said he was attempting to get a service hearing with the three-member SCC to point out specific instances of poor service and high rates.

Back Bay subscribers have established a central clearing house for complaints so they can present them in a public hearing. Residents with complaints are sending them to Mrs. Julia Ogden, Route 3, Box 322B, Virginia Beach. According to Canada, results also will be compiled and sent to Del. Richard Guy and City Councilmen Curtis Payne, Princess Anne, and Floyd Waterfield, Pungo.

Canada said the league's first meeting already had accomplished tangible results. "The last meeting already has produced new telephone lines and gotten engineers here to speak with you," he said.

Apparently it is going to take more than the presence of telephone engineers and new telephone lines to appease Back Bay residents. According to Turner, First Colony's manager, the company has lost 23 subscribers in the last two weeks. Several more at the meeting threatened to have their phones taken out if the appeal fails.

Boy Wins Earhart Award

Joe Miller, a 19-year-old freshman at VPI, received the Civic Air Patrol's second highest award during ceremonies Monday at C.A.P. Headquarters at Norfolk Regional Airport.

Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Miller of 404 Ticonderoga Road, became the first C.A.P. member from Virginia Beach to receive the Amelia Earhart Award. Miller completed 11 achievements including aerospace education, military leadership and first aid training to earn the award.

Presentation was made by Lt. Col. Douglas Hicks, deputy wing commander of the C.A.P. in Virginia. Miller, a C.A.P. member of the Norfolk Composite Squadron for two years, is a ground rescue specialist. He is a graduate of Princess Anne High School where he was cadet commander of the Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps.

City Seeks Fire Chief To Implement Study

By Les Lehigh

City Manager Roger M. Scott has launched a program to select one man to serve as fire chief for the City of Virginia Beach.

This move is the first step taken by the city in implementing recommendations made in the recent Municipal Fire Protection Study.

The study was conducted to determine what steps were necessary in improving fire fighting operations in the resort city, as well as the first step in consolidating the operations of all fire departments within the city under one supervising office.

The move must also be interpreted as the first step toward the placing of a complete paid firemen in a number of the existing volunteer fire departments throughout the city.

The selection of an overall fire chief began during the last meeting of the city's Fire Council, composed of the chiefs of each of the fire departments within the city and the city's Bureau of Fire Protection.

Scott sent a letter to members of the Fire Council which read: "I have studied the Municipal Fire Protection Study carefully, and have compared the recommendations of the Fire Council as they pertain to this study."

"I am pleased to report that there is no great disparity between your recommendations and my thoughts. It will be necessary to withhold any final decisions or relocation and abandonment of existing fire stations until a more realistic master street and highway plan can be adopted and a capital improvements program covering these streets and new stations finally decided upon.

"It appears from your recommendations and my study that the first step must necessarily be the designation of an overall chief, and possibly the assistant chief, to develop the framework and start the ball rolling to implement the study. Your very strong recommendation that the chief should be selected from within the city will be given prime consideration."

"It is my hope that the overall chief can be selected before July 1, 1971, and I will inform you when applications will be accepted so that any member of the volunteer or paid fire service within Virginia Beach who desires to do so can make application.

"I will try to keep you informed of other developments as they occur."

Commissioner of Revenue Ivan Mapp, who serves as Fire Council Chairman, said Scott also requested members of the Fire Council to submit to him the names of three persons the Council feels are qualified to fill the position of Fire Chief.

Indications are that while prime consideration in the final selection of a city-wide Fire Chief, this does not necessarily preclude the possibility of the appointment of an individual from outside the resort city to the office of Fire Chief of Virginia Beach.

Scott's reference to his comparison of Fire Council recommendations as they pertain to the Municipal Fire Protection Study was in regards to a recent evaluation of the recommendations by members of all the city's fire departments, volunteer and paid, which was conducted at his request.

The contents of this evaluation showed that these men, with a few exceptions, agreed with the major portion of the study. The exceptions included such items as initiation of a system to compensate volunteer firefighters for response to fires and attendance at drills; minor disagreements regarding closing and/or consolidation of certain present existing fire stations; and proposed locations of new stations to be built in the future; and minor disagreements concerning the number of hours paid fireman, when such a program is initiated on a city-wide basis, should many various fire stations which

Resort May Sport Own Fishing Fleet

Eight charter boat owners, have organized as the Virginia Beach Sports Fishing Center and are ready to go into operation out of Rudee Inlet this summer once the city completes the 11 new boat slips there.

There are actually 11 charters awaiting the slips, boat owner Pat Standing told City Council Tuesday, "but the other three have shown no interest in joining our organization."

Council, after much discussion, decided that Tourism Coordinator Sam Scott should go ahead and seek construction bids on the 11 slips, as well as design bids on possible related businesses, at the Rudee Inlet site.

Scott and Director of Economic Development James De-

Bellis said later it would take at least a month before the bids would be ready for final Council approval, but, providing that approval is forthcoming, the slips will be ready in time for the summer fishing season.

These new slips will provide the resort with a 23-boat charter boat fleet. There are already 12 boats at Rudee, organized as the Atlantic Charter Service, which have "planned" sports fishing out of the inlet for the past three years. Much of that time the boats were landlocked when sand periodically filled the narrow channel.

Captain Ray Richardson skipper of the Richey was on hand at Tuesday's meeting to speak on behalf of the Atlantic group. "Do you think Rudee Inlet can support 11 additional charter boats?" he was asked by BaySide Councilman Robert Cromwell. "No, I do not," was his quick reply. Some members of council questioned the advisability of proceeding with construction.

"That would be like telling motel owners along Atlantic Avenue that we had enough first class motels, we didn't need anymore," Scott said.

"No, the city can't do for some what it doesn't do for others," DeBellis agreed.

City Manager Roger Scott pointed out that of the $125,000 total investment in the marina, known and publicized as the

First Citizen Believes In Family Ties

By Helen Crist

The telephone rang at 8 a.m. last week at Mrs. Philip L. Russo's home in Thalia.

"Mary," her friend Mrs. Kitty Hudgins said, "be sure to stay home—I have some oysters for you."

"Oh but I can't," Mrs. Russo said. "I have to go to the store and then to a meeting."

"Wait for me," was the reply.

"Well, I thought it was a little odd that she was calling so early and insisting that I stay home."

At 8:30 a.m. the phone rang again. "Congratulations, Mrs. Russo, this is Jim Fawcett of the Jaycees. You've just been named 'Oh no not another committee,'" thought Mary Russo. "I was appointed the city's First Citizen for 1970."

"Needless to say, I was thrilled," she said, adding, "I didn't even know my name had been submitted." It was placed in nomination by the Cape Henry Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Russo is a member.

And Feb. 26, at the Black Angus Restaurant, at 6:30 p.m. she will receive the award. Former Governor Mills E. Godwin will be guest speaker at the banquet, which is open to the public.

But it's very much in keeping with Mrs. Russo's character, that she says, "I really feel that I'll be accepting this honor for all the club women of the Virginia Beach Council of Federated Women's Clubs who are now a moving force in the community in our fight on drugs."

Mrs. Russo, the wife of Circuit Court Judge Philip L. Russo, Jr., has been in the forefront, along with some 600 women of the Women's Council in their fight to control drug activities.

"Our biggest problem is that parents won't come forth and admit there is a problem," she said.

A dynamic vivacious woman, she shares the theory that a family is the basis of all that's good in society.

"We've got to strengthen the family life. I feel that the father has abdicated his place as head of the family. He is so busy working hard to give his family luxuries, that the basic role of child-rearing has fallen to the mother."

There are three children in the Russo family: Mary, 17, Philip, 12, Lee Ann, 15. "God bless their father," she says. "He is one of the greatest influences for good in our home."

They have rapport with their children, and they feel that all children want to be led in certain respects.

Especially is this true in religion. The Russo family all attend St. Nicholas Church together. All over the parish, there are groups of young people who meet with various parents to discuss their problems, ask questions and just talk to older people who will listen.

Judge and Mary Russo lead one of these groups, of juniors and seniors, who meet in their home every other week.

Artist 'Explores' Landscapes

Sidney K. Godwin, a 27-year-old Virginia Beach artist, believes in letting exploration "take you where it will." Recently, it has led him to imaginative landscapes rich in soft yellows and greens with occasional bold flings of red.

The results are on display through February at the Studio Gallery. Though his current exhibit is mostly landscapes, the former Old Dominion University fine arts major also does figurative work.

Godwin's current collection at the Studio Gallery reflects, he says, efforts "to pursue rhythms and harmonies found in Nature." "Fantasy Fields," a Godwin canvas that has received much attention from spectators, is one of his more daring landscape interpretations featuring lavish use of reds and mellowed pinks.

The young artist, whose education and work was interrupted by a three-year Army tour and a trip to Vietnam, has studied under Charles Sibley at ODU and portrait painter Greta Nelson. He's planning to attend Virginia Commonwealth University to complete his degree in fine arts.

James Morrison, baritone, and Frances Morrison, piano, will give a recital at the Norfolk Museum of Art and Sciences on Feb. 28 at 4 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison have recently moved to Virginia Beach and reside at 1556 Michigan Ave. in the Oceana area, where they have a studio for instruction in voice and piano.

The program includes four songs by Beethoven and the first performance of a song by Earle Ferguson, a Washington D.C. composer whose works have been praised by Washington critics. Also included are songs and arias by Bach, Schubert, Faure, Ravel and Aaron Copland.

Morrison is a former lawyer who recently determined to devote his full time and energy to music. He is a pupil of Todd Duncan, who is internationally known as a recitalist, actor and teacher. Morrison has been soloist in several Washington, D.C. churches and was until recently music director at the River Road Unitarian Church, Bethesda, Md. He has given several recitals in the Washington, D.C. area.

Mrs. Morrison is a pupil of Stewart Gordon, chairman

Tryouts

The first in a series of tryouts for the Aragona-Pembroke Little League baseball team will be held this Saturday at the minor league field at the end of Delaura Lane.

Twelve year-old boys will try out between 10 a.m. and noon, 11-year-olds will try out between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. and 10-year-olds between 3 and 5 p.m.

Boys who have registered and intend to play on the same team as last year need not try out. Only the boys who have graduated into another league or did not play last year must try out.

Eight-year-olds need not try out; they will be assigned to a team.

We've made things so easy for them, given them so much, that they're really bored. And this leads to trouble."

Family closeness extends to Mrs. Russo's mother, Mrs. E. Calligari, Jr. and her sister, Mrs. E. J. Gerloff, Jr. who live close by in Thalia.

And recalling her late father, who came to America as a young man, she remembers he told her as a youngster, "Thank God you live in this country."

Love of country is very much a part of the Russo creed. And that, perhaps, is a basic reason that Mrs. Russo wants so much to help the young people fight drug addiction.

"The Beach is now doing a tremendous job," she says. "It was so difficult to know just what to do at first."

Drug education is now a part of the school program. And recently Mrs. Russo made a plea to the governor to convert Camp Pendleton into a rehabilitation center for addicts.

She is a member of the Governor's Council on Narcotics and Drug Abuse and of the executive committee of the United Drug Abuse Council of Tidewater.

She is also on the boards of the Arthritis Foundation, the YWCA and the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center.

But with all her activities she still is at home when the children arrive from school.

In 21 years of giving the First Citizen award, she is only the third woman to be so honored.

"The women can do so much," she says.

Sewing expertise at the hands of Senora Angelina Martinez and Senora Elsa Martinez, her daughter-in-law, catch the fancy of little Lena Farinas.

Sew for Ballet

For Senora Angelina Martinez and her daughter-in-law, Senora Elsa Martinez, a life-long association with the ballet didn't end when they fled the Castro regime and left their beloved Havana.

When they found a haven at the Beach they were penniless, all their earthly possessions confiscated by the Communists. But they still had intact a priceless talent—the ability to sew and create beautiful garments.

In Havana, Senora Angelina was director of the costume department of the National Ballet. Senora Elsa was well established as a seamstress of note in her city too.

Their talents are expressed now, in the costumes which they made from Mrs. Martin's sketches, for the Virginia Beach Civic Ballet Company.

On Feb. 20, in one of a series of performances, the dancers will present an "Evening of Ballet" at First Colonial High School, at 8 p.m.

Most of the sewing is done now, by Senora Elsa, a former flitter for Nicholson and Marks, with the guidance of Senora Angelina.

It was nearly five years ago that Senora Elsa, her husband, Rodolfo, and their sons, Rudolph, now 18 and John, 15, fled from Havana.

Three years later they were able to bring Senora Angelina over. With her came Rodolfo's sister, Theresa, a dancer with Alicia Alonso Ballet Co. in Havana.

Senora Elsa explained: "So many Cubans didn't like the system that Castro said, 'OK, anyone who wants can leave.'"

With that, a mass exodus ensued.

They're finding it so, for Rodolfo is now a Linotype operator with the Virginian-Pilot; Theresa teaches Spanish dancing at the Beach; Senora Elsa alters clothes for a select few in her home on General Gage Court; Senora Angelina supervises it all, still using her expertise with the sewing needle.

And Rodolfo's brother, Enrique Martinez, for 25 years ballet master of the American Ballet Theatre in New York, was able to reassure them that America is surely the land of opportunity.

They're finding it so, for Rodolfo is now a Linotype operator with the Virginian-Pilot; Theresa teaches Spanish dancing at the Beach; Senora Elsa alters clothes for a select few in her home on General Gage Court; Senora Angelina supervises it all, still using her expertise with the sewing needle.

Flute Concert Saturday

Flautist Scott Hershey and pianist Mrs. Dawn Drye will present a flute recital Saturday at 8 p.m. at Baylake United Methodist Church.

Hershey holds a B.A. degree from the College of William and Mary and has given full recitals at the college and at the Norfolk Museum.

He has studied under Kenton Terry of the Philadelphia Orchestra and Richard Townsend of the National Symphony. He plans to study under James Pellerite at Indiana University where he will work toward a M.A. degree in performance.

Mrs. Drye graduated from Old Dominion University with a B.S. degree in music (piano). She presently studies with Frances Marsh Buntin at Marsh School of Music and teaches piano. She serves as minister of music at London Bridge Baptist Church.

The first portion of the program will be devoted to Mozart's "Concerto in G Major" which is composed of some of the most lyrical and ordered passages in the flute literature.

After an intermission, Hershey will perform the flute solo "Caprice No. 23 in E(b)" by Nicolo Paganini, followed by Ernest Bloch's "Suite Modale" and "Concertino" by Cecil Chaminade.

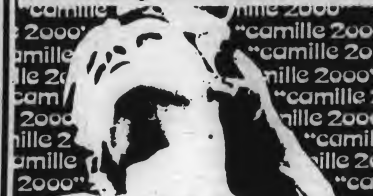

The church is located on Shore Drive just east of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel.

Whitley Will Succeed Scott

Whitley

Robert E. (Bob) Whitley, 27, for the past 3 1/2 years assistant executive vice president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, has been named tourist development coordinator for the city.

Announcement of Whitley's appointment was made by City Manager Roger M. Scott during a regular informal briefing with City Council today.

Whitley will begin his new work on March 1, although he will not formally succeed Samuel W. Scott, Jr. in the Department of Economic Development until March 15. Sam Scott (no relation to the city manager) has resigned, effective March 15, to join a Virginia Beach real estate and insurance firm.

Jaycees Announce Judges

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have announced judges for the selection of their Outstanding Young Police Officer award.

They are Commissioner of Revenue Ivan D. Mapp, Civitan Club President Bill Herschman, Chamber of Commerce Treasurer James G. Kontopanos, High Constable R. R. Buddy McChesney and Councilman George R. Ferrell.

Nominations for the award were closed yesterday. The search is part of a statewide Jaycee program to spotlight the achievements and dedication of professional police officers between the ages of 21 and 35.

BOSS OF THE YEAR-Mrs. Brenda Miller congratulates her boss, Peter C. Anderson, after he was named "Boss of the Year" Friday by the Virginia Beach Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International). Anderson is division manager for the Tidewater area of Blue Cross of Virginia. Mrs. Miller has been his secretary for four years.

Money Bag Taken

Police are searching for four juveniles about 16 or 17 years of age suspected of taking a money bag last week from the office of the Union 76 Service Station in the 100 block of S. Rosemont Road.

The bank deposit bag, reportedly containing about $200 in cash and some $30 in checks was taken from an office desk.

Whitley and his wife, the former Carol Collins, are both natives of the area. They live in Virginia Beach's Bow Creek subdivision with their 2 1/2-year-old daughter and are expecting their second child in April.

During 3 1/2 years with the Chamber of Commerce, his duties have involved coordination of tourism programs, including close ties with state and private organizations. He has assisted in at least a dozen promotions in other states and Canada.

The Virginia Travel Council, at its annual meeting in January, honored Whitley with a "Meritorious Service Award" for his effective efforts in the state's tourism industry.

Before joining the Beach Chamber of Commerce, Whitley attended Old Dominion University and was an advertising account executive for four years with two area newspapers.

In his new position, Whitley will be responsible for convention solicitations, Civic Center activities, the city marinas in Rudee Inlet and Long Creek, plus the full range of other tourist attractions.

'Creative Man' Lecture Subject

"Creative Man" will be the subject of lectures at the Association for Research and Enlightenment, 67th Street and Atlantic Ave. Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.

A Youth Group of speakers will be in charge. Edgar Evans Cayce, younger son of the late Edgar Cayce, will lecture at the Sunday Forum at 3:30 p.m. His subject will be "A Positive Approach to Negative E.S.P." These lectures are open to the public and will give ample opportunity for questions and answers. For further information call the Association.

Council's request for design bids on the property was made because of the recent proposal of a floating restaurant at the site.

Larasan Citations

Members of the Larasan Realty sales staff have received numerous sales accomplishment awards for 1970.

Jesse B. Pugh, Jr. was honored with an award in the National Association of Homebuilders' Sales and Marketing Council's Million Dollar Circle. This represents the fifth consecutive year Mr. Pugh has been a member and qualifies him for life-time membership in that circle. Pugh is the sales counselor for Clark-Whitehill Enterprises' homes in the Windsor Oaks West section of Virginia Beach and is active in the Plaza Lions Club, Scout troop 64 - in Princess Anne Plaza, and Plaza Methodist Church.

Bill Barlow, Jack Brewer, William A. Rawls, O. W. Tolley, William Walde, and Ernest Payne have also received Million Dollar Circle awards from the National Council for 1970.

L. A. Sancio, president of Larasan Realty, has also announced that Leo Winters has been named the Resale Salesman of the Year at Larasan Realty, and that Bill Barlow received a similar award as New Home Salesman of the year for outstanding sales records and service to their clients and company. Winters was also honored by the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors for sales in 1970.

Scientists have notoriously bad memories. Phyllis' memory is so good the science men call her "a memory bank."

Phyllis does other useful things.

Recently, she spent two weeks at NATO Headquarters in Norfolk as hostess to representatives of the nations in Europe who comprise NATO.

Spaniards, Italians, Hollanders, you name it. And a grand job she did in making our European allies feel at home and interested in this part of the U.S.

Mighty useful gal to have around is Phyllis.

We ought to know.

Confidence Is Needed

The citizens of Virginia Beach are concerned about their city. If there are any who doubt it, attend City Council meetings, read the Letters to the Editor column in this newspaper, just talk to your next door neighbor.

Council meetings usually resemble a three-ring circus rather than the execution of the city's business. And the reason is because so many people want to be heard on so many issues....all worthwhile but nevertheless trying.

"This is the age of involvement," said one councilman in explaining the growing citizen attendance at these meetings. Perhaps. But from where we sit it appears more than just an age. The people are genuinely concerned about the direction, or lack of direction, their city is headed.

Not that there are any staggering problems at the present time. But the average citizen can visualize the pitfalls ahead if some direction is not established and they are speaking up now while there is yet time.

The citizens who speak out against signboards are primarily the same ones who opposed disposition of a portion of Seashore State Park. These people are telling City Council, indeed the entire population, that a stand must be taken now

If this city is to retain its natural beauty, one of Virginia Beach's greatest assets. They are not speaking out against progress. They are saying to council that progress lies in orderly development.

Those who speak out at Planning Commission meetings and on planning matters at City Council are not just fighting to protect their own neighborhoods from what they believe to be undesirable forces. They are telling the city's leaders that they need a plan, a pattern, for guidance. These people are not speaking out against progress. They, too, are saying that progress lies in orderly development.

Council is obviously pulled in all directions. It is not an enviable position. But they were put there by the people and it is their responsibility to heed the wishes of the people. Perhaps the unrest of the citizens reflects unrest among council itself. There is a need for better understanding among council, the Planning Commission and the School Board, the three areas which most affect the people. When this break down in communication is resolved, City Council might see a more confident attitude in the people.

TO CATCH AN INDUSTRY

By John Griffin

(SECOND IN A SERIES)

Last week's article dealt with the attitudes that may help or harm the industrial development effort of a community. This week we use extracts from the book THE PRACTICE OF INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT by Howard D. Bessire to point out some of the physical properties necessary to make a community ready for industrial development efforts.

The following paragraphs describe some of the things industrialists look at. These are by no means listed in any order of importance. It would be difficult to rank them because without one the others may prove useless. It could be like a house of cards. If one card is removed the house will collapse.

To a great degree all industry is interested in good educational facilities in the community in which they plan to locate and in which their employees will live. A good public school system is important to all industry. It is important to assure the education of the employees' families who are already there. It is important also from the standpoint of offering education to the children of those executives, foremen, etc., that they may move into your community from the outside.

Many industries demand the presence of higher education facilities. Few, if any, of the electronics and other so-called sophisticated industries will locate in a community unless there is a four-year accredited college or university, or at least one nearby. Some companies will not locate unless there is a university close by offering advanced degrees.

Another educational facility that is useful for all and demanded by many is some sort of technical, or if you prefer, "vocational" high school. So one of the major points in getting ready for industry today is making certain you have a good public school system and, if at all possible, making available technical training and higher education facilities.

A good highway network with freeways or expressways making access from all points in the city to your industrial districts easily available in vasential. Along with this goes good paved streets throughout the community and a good traffic control system. However, good paved streets do not show up too well if they are left dirty and unwept.

Good medical facilities again are a must, either in the city or, if they are a very small community, they must be available nearby.

A good water supply and a good sewer system, both sanitary and storm, is essential. Water is naturally more important to an industry that uses it in processing, but water is of some importance to all industries. A water system with insufficient pressure to operate an industry's sprinkler system is not very attractive to that prospective industry.

Someone remarked recently about an experience they had when visiting with a lady in a small community about her town. She was quite proud of her city but in the conversation mentioned she had wanted to take a bath that afternoon. Unfortunately she found this impossible since she couldn't get enough water. It seems that the laundry down the street was running their daily load and therefore her water pressure was low. That the poor lady was unable to take a bath was bad enough but imagine an industry faced with a fire in their plant.

A good police and fire department is essential. The latter will not only protect the property belonging to industry so that they are not faced with production losses for a period of time but will help keep their insurance rates lower. How good the former is will be reflected in the community's crime rate and again will protect the property belonging to industry. A low crime rate will help attract employees to any community.

A history of passing bond issues that are needed for civic improvements is a good sign that a community is ready or getting ready for industry. Rather than being like the man who, when asked if his community had plans for improvement, answered that they needed to get industry and then improve it, be the one who, when asked this question, can say that things have already been improved, or you can answer that there are some things that need to be done and you are getting them done so as to be able to attract industry to your community.

Now, of course, all of these improvements entail taxes. It is true that taxes as such are often listed far down the list in importance when an industry is considering a community but they are one of the factors evaluated. However, the consideration is usually given not so much on how high the taxes may be per se but how they are divided. Is too much of the tax burden placed on the industry and business, or too much on the individual? Is there a fair and happy median? Sometimes the person doing the evaluating for the industry is the man who is to become manager of that new plant. If this is the case he may take an even keener interest in how much of the tax burden, such as income taxes, are levied at the individual. However in all cases a lot of weight will be given to how ready the community is in light of its physical factors.

Most good industries are not only willing but want to pay for good police and fire protection and education. They will prefer the town that has a little higher tax rate and is ready to the one that has a lower tax rate and is waiting for the industry to come in order to help them pay for these improvements. In the latter type of community taxes have only one way to go and that is up. In the former, industry can be assured that the rate at least will be fairly stable as few taxing bodies take the opportunity to lower rates. In addition to being interested in whether the city already has the improvements and that the taxes are fair and equitable between industry and individuals there is another item in which industry is interested. This is how efficiently and honestly the government is run. In other words are they getting a dollar's worth of city services for a dollar of taxes paid? This latter item may be the most important one in the category of taxes.

Assuming the community has these improvements and is physically ready for industry, the mental attitude becomes of prime importance. That will be the subject of next week's article.

'LOOK, HAVE A HEART!'

Comments on Bond, Morale

To the Editor:

Have been answering some of your Sun Surveys without comment. However this weeks survey needs some comment. I am very definitely opposed to another school referendum for school bonds as things now stand on all this multi-housing that, if it continues, will go a long way in eventually bankrupting Virginia Beach.

Don't get me wrong for I am in favor of proper education and facilities for our children, but not at the expense of property-owning, tax-paying citizens. We are more than taking care of our share of the load but those people in all this rental area with children are not. Why could not council adopt a school tax for these people? By so doing it could help lighten the tax burden on property owners.

And another view on this, why should the city go to the expense of another vote on this school issue when it is firmly felt by those to whom I have discussed this matter that it would fall again. Even with all the frills eliminated, the issue was soundly trounced last month and it will be so again. I will again do all I can, if it should come to another vote, to defeat it.

There seems to be a ray of hope in actions of City Council, even if they recently conducted a "Comedy of Errors" in their chambers. Let them, the School Board and Planning Commission get together and start thinking about the permanent residents here. I cannot close this without a comment on your editorial in this week's paper FIND THE CAUSE. The cause lies in the low morale among city employees for why else has Virginia Beach lost all those administrators in the past year. I know some of them personally and I know some that are still with the city and it is sickening to talk to them and share their feelings of discontent and knowing how things are at City Hall that they are apparently without any future. Those that have left and those now with the city feel and feel their future is nothing with the present administration.

The burden of all this discontent lies squarely on the shoulders of the city manager. When a vacancy arises does he find someone in the city government to fill this vacancy or look around the city for a competent replacement? No, he goes out of town and brings in one of his friends. Does that constitute building a fine and loyal administration? I leave that question for your readers.

Something will have to be done to the city manager's little dynasty. Council take note. Stanleigh H. Jones

To the Editor:

I hope and pray that our city leaders will not propose another school bond issue. I am one of the property owners with a fixed income of $4,596.00 per year. In the past ten years my taxes have increased from $130.00 per year to $240.00 per year. The cost of living and the state sales tax have caused my income to shrink to the point of bare existence. Archie R. Thomas

To the Editor:

After witnessing the tremendous turn out of the general public at the meeting of the Planning Commission, the majority of whom were backing the city ordinance which would strictly limit placement size and uses of billboards, I came away astounded at the weight the Planning Commission gave to the business interests as represented at that meeting. The problem boiled down to this. Are public decisions concerning all of us going to be determined by those who are willing to resort to any device to force their will upon the citizens of this town or is the majority opinion going to prevail?

I felt sickened at the sight of Negroes from Seaside, whose poverty had been taken advantage of, carrying signs saying "Virginia Beach Needs Advertising," "Ocean City Has Signs," "Why Can't Virginia Beach?" etc. What kind of people take advantage of our poor? Obviously, they are in the minority, thank God. Obviously, they don't give a damn about Virginia Beach, or what the people here want.

Anyone who needs a billboard to do his thinking and to make his decisions is not needed in this area - or in this country - for that matter. We do need people thoughtful enough to be concerned about the beauty of our town, people determined not to let it become visually polluted. That is what attracts people to it-not billboards. Those kinds of people were present at the hearing on Tuesday, Feb. 2, and this town is filled with them.

Let us hope that the Planning Commission now realizes that the large majority of Virginia Beach citizens back their proposed sign ordinance, and that we are sickened at the depths to which the opposition has stooped in order to attain their unpopular goal. Only the lowest of the low would bribe our young to sign petitions, and pay our poor to parade for a cause which the poor cannot comprehend.

And what about the young man who pleaded for aesthetic values? His was the voice to the young who wish for America the beautiful. Is the generation gap still so wide that we cannot understand the year for beauty in the young and accede to their thoughtfulness and concern when it is expressed?

EDITOR

Whose wishes will predominate in this matter - concerned citizens, concerned youth, our Planning Commission, or paid petitioners, sign-carriers and spokesmen backed by vested interests? If our Planning Commission rightly appraises the mood of the citizens of the city, billboards will no longer pollute Our Town. Anne W. Ramsey

To the Editor:

It makes no difference whether or not the city puts up another school bond issue before the people--the citizens still will not vote for it. Until the City Council does away its policy of permissiveness towards developers we will not pass a school bond issue. Sincerely, Julia M. Broch

'No' to Bond Issue

Last week's Sun Survey question--"Would you favor another school bond issue within the next six months if it were 'trimmed down' to provide only the barest academic necessities?"--produced a very interesting response.

The vote was vehemently against another bond issue; but one reader favored it. And the response was strong enough to be fairly representative of the city's voters.

This must surely squelch the idea that the only reason the first bond issue was defeated was because it covered too many "luxury" items in the proposed schools. As an earlier Sun editorial pointed out, and this week's response proves, the defeat was an indication from the people that City Council and the School Board must find an answer to the growing educational crisis in this city... and the answer is not continued construction of schools.

There were some very interesting notes on the questionnaires: "We who did vote 'NO' should continue to disapprove bond issues until City Council 'understands' what we are saying to them. One wonders if they read editorial sections of the V.B. Sun and other local papers, our only forum should Council permit the 'Mayor' to deny Council meeting discussion." "Not until an overall plan for the city's future development is made known and agreed--and more economical and practical school building plans are decided upon." "Virginia Beach is being taxed into bankruptcy by the insatiable demands of our

In a recent column I made it known to one and all that I was an announced candidate for the office of vice president. Since I can get along with both the Democrats and Republicans, as well as just about anyone, I offered to take the no. 3 spot on any ticket.

It seems that no one has ever sought the office of vice president before. All our glorious leaders seem to have their eye on the presidency.

I am not sure but they must think something is wrong with being vice president. They may be right.

AT ANY RATE, I announced that I was off and running and I hope no one makes anything out of my being "off." I didn't mean it that way, it might be true but I am sensitive about it.

In my column I suggested that my supporters should send money, cash please--no checks--to the editor of their paper who would send it on to me. I promised to spend anything I received.

It is with a great deal of pleasure and amazement that I am in receipt of contributions for my campaign. At this time I wish to say that, true to my promise, I have spent everything received.

While I won't bore you with the detailed accounting, you have my word that every cent went to a good cause. All future contributions will be applied to good use and spent just as soon as they arrive.

SOME OF those sending in money asked questions and I will try to answer them all. Since I have spent everything they sent in I feel I should try at least to answer their questions. First of all, to the man who sent in a dollar and asked for a job when I was elected:

As an honest candidate I can't make any promises about jobs. Besides, I have a big family, lots of in-laws and out-laws. I am sure you will understand that I must take care of them first. Now if you had sent me five dollars I might have made an exception.

To the young man who sent me a quarter and asked me how I feel about the draft and Vietnam:

I think it is dangerous to sit in a draft. A person could get a bad cold that way. If you will send me another quarter I will be happy to state my position on Vietnam. Be sure to let me know if you mean South or North Vietnam.

If the lady who sent me a dime will write me and tell me all about her financial condition, her cash, stocks, bonds, property, etc., I will be happy to tell her how I feel about marrying her. While I am waiting, I will check with my wife and see how she feels about me having more than one wife. It is alright with me if she doesn't mind.

A special thanks goes to the young boy in the sixth grade who sent me a nickel and asked me how I feel about school. Well, I didn't like it much when I was in school and I like schools less now that I am out I suggest you study hard, get all the education you can and then you can help me try and change the present system to a more meaningful and effective one.

To the man who sent me a dollar and asked me what I would do if I was elected vice president and then the president died: Let me say this about that. To start with, I would do my best to see that the president stayed healthy. If anything should happen to him and I was VP, I think I would say a long, sincere prayer for the country and then I would resign. After all, if I wanted to be president I wouldn't be running for vice president.

To the newspaper editor who sent me two cents and asked for my views about the large newspapers and major TV reporters: It is good to hear from the last of the big spenders, friend. Of course, it could well be that you sent just about what my opinion on the subject is worth. Oh well, you sent me the money so I will answer you. To be honest, if they all went on a vacation and didn't come back I can't think of one I would miss a bit.

If the old goat who sent me half a dollar bill will send me the other half I will answer his question. I don't think it was nice to send me half a dollar bill and promise to send the other half if I was elected. You must remember, I am just running. I am not trying to get elected.

My extra special thanks to the lady who sent me the money and told me how she liked my columns and just knew I would make a good vice president. If you have any questions just let me know.

Last but not least, I have a word for all those people who sent in foreign money and suggested I leave the country to spend it.

If you will send me a plane ticket, first class, of course, I will take you up on the offer.

All this campaigning has been tiring. I need a vacation. That is for sure!

INSIGHT

A WEEKLY PICTORIAL

Little Theatre Presents

"DEATH OF A SALESMAN"

After two successful performances at Princess Anne High School and two more at Cox High School, the Virginia Beach Little Theatre is getting its production of Arthur Miller's "Death of A Salesman" geared for the next five performances at the Bay Harbour Room of the White Heron Motel.

It will open, under the direction of Sam Hakim, February 26 and will continue February 27, March 5-6 and March 12. An optional buffet will be served at 7 p.m. followed by the play at 8:30 p.m.

The student performances were part of a cooperative effort between the VBLT and the High School English Departments to bring to life a drama the English classes have been studying. The IN SIGHT photographer visited back stage during a dress rehearsal at Cox High School last week.

VI RAGAN, as Linda Loman and PHIL UHLER, as Willy Loman, the two leads in "Death of A Salesman", are caught in one of the few times they are off-stage during the play.

GERRY DENNIS awaits her cue backstage in "Salesman", her first Little Theatre role.

When the play's lighting chairman, CARI HAMBLIN, became ill, Cox student MARIE COLLINS (center) took over and received much praise for her ability from cast and crew. Giving moral support were two other Cox students GINNY PULLEY (left) and STEPHANIE SCHROEDER. Much of the special effects in the play are done with lighting.

Director SAM HAKIM assembles the cast on stage for a last minute briefing before final rehearsal at Cox High School. Pictured are PHIL UHLER, VI RAGAN, JANE and PETE SCOPPA and (back to camera) ALAN BARBER.

The 3-room set is divided by cut-away walls...VI RAGAN and PHIL UHLER are pictured in the master bedroom, in the center is the kitchen and out of camera range is the sons' bedroom.

LINDA PETERSON applies make-up as DIRK VAN ALLEN (center) and NIKE BOKE laugh about the "integrated" dressing room.

Accomplished performer PETE SCOPPA gives a word of encouragement to his wife JANE, in her first stage undertaking.

Assembling an authentic wardrobe from the 1930's and 1940's was no easy matter but wardrobe chairman BETH SMITH, with no previous costuming experience, came through like a professional.

Rose Hall recently completed redecorating a portion of the old house to be used as a bridal salon. EVIE MYATT and DONNA BEIER, bridal consultants, are shown with bride, BEVERLY WILSON.

The original building is over 250 years old and was originally a Thoroughgood land house. The building of the house is believed to have begun in 1693 of all brick construction. It was held by the Tories during the Revolution and by the Yankees during the Civil War. There is a dungeon which still had chains, that were used to secure prisoners, at the time of a previous redecoration in 1953. Although the woodwork was scraped to the bare wood no structural changes were made. The building has been redone in Wythe house gold inside and out with a darker shade on the woodwork and trim. Drapes, carpeting and furnishing were selected to blend with these colors.

This is no time to be overweight.

At your age you should be having the time of your life... doing all the "in" things. Like wearing great threads.

But if you're overweight life may not be so rosy. But it doesn't have to be that way.

We've proved that at Weight Watchers. We'll show you how to "re-educate" your eating habits... How you can eat well, snack often and still lose weight... and keep it off for good.

Kiddie Puppet Show Plays To SRO

Little ELSIE, 18 months, sat on the lap of her mother, MRS. TIA SCIGULINSKY, and gave the princess a great big hand.

"The Princess Who Would Not Smile" had nothing on the audience. There were some serious faces but everyone enjoyed the show.

MR. and MRS. E. J. REIHER are patrons of the Windsor Woods branch library, in fact there are seven library cards in their family. To show their appreciation for many hours of enjoyable reading the REIHER'S gave their third puppet show at the library Saturday.

The REIHER'S started puppeteering about ten years ago when they were stationed in Key West, Florida, and they say it has become quite a time consuming hobby, but a very pleasurable one.

Saturday is a busy day for children at the library. Besides the puppet show the Children's Department, Virginia Beach Public Library presents movies on Saturday at Windsor Woods, Kempeville and 22nd Street branches.

MR. and MRS. REIHER worked the hand puppets from behind a stage which they built and played to a standing room only audience.

Sweets for husbands served Alanton style

Alanton Trails Garden Club has the special affinity of garden clubbers for flowers, it's true.

But they also have a special love, and a real affection for the older men and women confined to the Shore Drive Convalescent Home.

Not a week goes by, that they don't brighten the days of the patients with such things as homemade cookies, cakes, dietetic candy, gum, smuggies and sweaters, even radices.

"And we often read them the Bible, play checkers, bingo and just help take care of their needs," said Mrs. Joseph Dawley, president.

Dave Douglas White, Miss Heidi Susan Paul, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

The bride wore a gown of white peau-de-satin. The Empire bodice with self-covered buttons up the back was designed with a Victorian neckline and long sleeves. It was appliqued with re-embroidered Alencon lace.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Oceana Officers Club.

After a Southern wedding trip, the couple will live in Pensacola, Fla.

The bride is a graduate of Old Dominion College. The groom, a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, is in flight training, Pensacola, Fla.

And do the patients appreciate it?

"They just hug us and kiss us and it's wonderful to see," the girls say.

And Sunday night, the club did something for their husbands as well. At Mrs. A. C. Marquess, Jr.'s home, on Duke of Windsor Road, they gave them a deluxe cocktail party with all homecooked dishes especially for them. It was, of course, Valentine's Day, and what better time to let a husband know he's appreciated?

What do you give to life?

By Rev. Joyce Kramer

"You get out of life just what you put into it." Do you believe this? Often our first reaction to this statement is one of resistance and resentment, for we are inclined to feel that we have put more into life than we have received in return.

If you are courageous enough to check up on yourself, you will find that you do get out of life just what you put into it. If you are angry, impatient and critical in your attitudes toward life and others, you will find your own life becoming somewhat unpleasant, chaotic, and frustrating. You will run into first one problem, then another until you change your attitude, for "as both in the women's and men's fashions being shown from La Vogue and the Hub of Military Circle.

Clark Godfrey's Orchestra will play from 4:00 to 9:30 during the parade of "Fashions For Heart's Sake," and from 9:30 to 12:00 for dancing.

Tickets are on sale at the Civic Center, Webster's and from members of the sponsoring clubs.

you are doing unto others, so is it being done unto you." If you are loving, happy, enthusiastic and optimistic about life and people, and direct your time, efforts and energy toward purposeful activity, you will find your life blessed with order, loving relationships, happy experiences and success.

Give the best of yourself to life. Put joy and enthusiasm into your living. Put love to work. Make right use of your God-given talents and abilities. In so doing, you will be giving your best to life—the best will come back to you.

I GIVE MY VERY BEST TO LIFE AND THE VERY BEST IS GIVEN TO ME.

By Helen Crist

When your husband is a Continental chef, with an European background of five years merely learning the culinary art, you've got to be either the luckiest woman around or the most unfortunate, depending on the point of view.

For pretty brown-eyed brunette Mrs. Janice Flinte, whose German-born husband, Helmuth, is the rave-getting chef of Princess Anne Country Club, it's no problem at all.

"He doesn't criticize my cooking," she says quickly, and Helmuth adds, "I really enjoy her home-cooked meals."

Janice, who attended Bob Jones University, before their marriage in 1966, wisely lets Helmuth do the talking when the subject is food for it's here that he's an authority.

Three years of apprenticeship in Düsseldorf were followed by additional years in some of Switzerland's finest hotels, where he became a full-fledged chef.

"Switzerland," he says, "has the best food in the world. It's partly because of the great tourist trade and the money that's concentrated there."

The 29-year-old personable young man is a member of the International Chef Association.

"What," we asked, "is the difference between a cook and a chef?"

"Oh, a cook takes orders from the chef, who supervises the menus, the kitchen, the cooking. I myself make the special items though."

And you can bet they're seasoned to perfection. It's here, too, that Helmuth has a pet peeve against Americans. "They take a plate and put salt and pepper on it right away without even tasting it. In Europe it would be terrible; they would never get away with it."

It would seem, too, to be an insult to the cook, who's spent hours meticulously seasoning the dish to just the right stage.

Helmuth's a native of Eisenbach, in what is now East Germany.

It was established by the Russians after World War II, when the country was divided into East and West Germany. Eisenbach was just over the border-line.

His father owned three hotels and a coffee-house there.

"All this was taken by the communists," Helmuth says.

He came to America, then, because of an uncle in New York, and he says, "This is still the best place to live, the land of opportunity."

Now only 29, he's been chef for the Empire State Building, and the Christian Admiral Hotel, in Cape May.

It was in Cape May that he wrote a cooking column for the Star and Wave newspaper.

He calls himself old-fashioned, at least when it comes to the German concept of discipline.

On the subject of children, students, and riots in America, he says:

"Students are at an impressionable age. They play one parent against the other.... they have too much freedom from their parents."

Riots? Never in East Germany or Cuba—they'd be shot, he says, adding:

"I do not think anyone has the right to criticize the State Department or authorities unless he has proven himself in life."

Discipline carries over into his work too. He says, "your work and business should be not only for money, but you have to like it, and be personally involved in it too."

He himself, is most happy in his work, and he passes on some recipes for Sun readers.

Salad a la Mode de Chef for Diet Watchers

1 head lettuce
1 head romaine
1 head chikory
1 head escarole
1 head water cress
4 tomatoes, quartered
7 oz. cooked white chicken
7 oz. baked ham
7 oz. Swiss cheese
7 oz. beef tongue
12 radishes
1 T. chopped parsley
4 hard-boiled eggs
Salad dressing

METHOD: Wash and chop lettuce, romaine, chikory and escarole. Place in salad bowl. Cut chicken, ham, cheese and tongue into julienne strips. Place on top of salad. Garnish with remaining ingredients. Use favorite dressing. Serves 5-6.

Basketball Competition Is Saturday

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have announced plans for the 1971 "Dribble and Shoot Competition" in basketball to be held Saturday, at 2 pm in The Kempville High School Gym. It will be open to boys from 8 to 16 years of age. Last year's competition attracted over 500 boys and their parents.

All boys who plan to enter the competition must complete a registration form and return the top portion to PO BOX 2394, Va. Beach or to Phillips Oldsmobile before Friday. The entry forms are available at Phillips Oldsmobile, the office of any public school, or by calling Bud Rockefeller at 340-5241. Footware for the competition will be sneakers or tennis shoes, but no street shoes, will be permitted on the gym floor.

Entrants will be divided into four classes according to age and will earn points in three events: Foul Shooting, Speed Dribbling, and Speed Shooting. Total points earned will determine the winner in each class. Ties will be played off on the spot. Winners of each class will receive trophies and advance to statewide competition.

Cubs Win

Cub Pack 378 was selected Best-in-Show at the PAVAB District Scout-O-Rama which was held at the Virginia Beach Dome. The theme of the booth was "Old Glory."

The Cub dens enlarged on this theme with each selecting one event in American history that concerned the flag. Den 1's display concerned the first formal flag raising of the flag at two Jims. By using imagination and ingenuity they constructed an eye-catching display out of rocks and soldiers. John Paul Jones was selected by the boys in Den 3 when they discovered that his ship, the Ranger, was the first ship to fly the American flag at sea. Den 4's display concerned Fort McHenry, where Francis Scott Key was inspired to write our National Anthem, the Star-Spangled Banner. Their model of Fort McHenry was quite authentic and was made of plaster of paris and tongue depressors. A more recent event was chosen by the boys in Den 7. Their lunar scene depicted our first landing on the moon and the placing of the flag on the moon. The display also showed the first moon walk by Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin. The cubs in Den 5 learned and studied about flags in our history and their display depicted these flags.

Pack 378 is sponsored by the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church. Robert Coulthard is Institutional Representative and Woody Smith serves as pack committee Chairman.

BADGES & BANTER

Congratulations are in order for officer J. J. Sciorinto and his wife Kathy on the birth of their son. Sciorinto tells us the lad, "James Patrick", weighed in at 7 pounds 13 ounces on his arrival, and that young James, mother and father are all doing well.

This past week marked the passing of a high light in the career of M. T. Holland, director of the city's Fire Prevention Bureau. Chief Holland celebrated the anniversary of 29 years of service as a municipal employee with the City of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County.

Two men who are devoting their lives to the protection of the lives and property of Virginia Beach residents have achieved new honors. "Jake" Brammer, assigned to the city's Fire Prevention Bureau, who is also a very active Rescue Squad member, was named "Chief" of the Civil Defense Fire Unit attached to the Beach Borough Fire Department, William V. Simmons, a long time member of the Beach Borough department was appointed to the rank of Lieutenant in the unit. We had the pleasure of receiving a phone call the other day from Lt. E. L. Knowles, 1st Police Precinct, recovering from a recent heart attack. Knowles appears to be in good spirits and tells us the day of his heart attack will long be remembered for a personal achievement. He tells us that was the same day he carded his best golfing score by rounding the 18 hole, 6,320 yard par 72 tricky course, with a one over par total of 73.

Youth Is Pedestrian Fatality

A 15-year-old boy has become the first pedestrian fatality of the year in the City of Virginia Beach, as well as the fifth traffic fatality of the year.

Authorities identified him as Bruce C. Cross, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Cross of Burns Road.

Investigators said young Cross apparently attempted to cross Northampton Boulevard a short distance from the intersection of Burton Station Road when he was struck by an auto. Apparently the boy ran from the roadway dividing median strip into the path of the oncoming vehicle they said.

Cross was pronounced dead on arrival at Virginia Beach General Hospital. No charges have been filed.

Officer Ball and "Major" All in a day's work

Officer George E. Ball, 2nd Police Precinct, and his German Shepherd K-9 partner "Major" distinguished themselves during the recent freezing spell in an unusual rescue operation.

Ball and Major were on routine patrol when a call came that a small dog was trapped on thin ice at the edge of Lynnhorn Bay in the area of the 600 block of Linbay Drive. Using a pair of hip-books borrowed from an area resident, Ball began wading through the chilly waters in efforts to reach the dog. The animal began falling through the ice into the water and moving farther out into the Bay.

Ball called to those on shore to try to locate a long line of rope to aid him in reaching the dog. Major, still in the K-9 patrol unit with the rear window partially rolled down, mistook Ball's calls as cries for help. Major, as he has been trained to do, jumped from the vehicle, leaped into the icy waters and began swimming to Ball.

3 Arrested In Pace Shooting

Three suspects have been arrested in connection with the Jan. 6th wounding of Det. Charles C. Pace when he entered a Northampton Boulevard Be-Lo Supermarket during an armed robbery.

Officials identified the suspects as Curtis Jordan, alias Alexander Holmes, 30, of Kirtrell Street, Norfolk; Van Burton, 23, of Swan Arc, Norfolk; and a 17-year-old juvenile.

Pace, and Det. W. M. Wood who is assisting the investigation, said Jordan was taken into custody by a Dade County, Fla., deputy sheriff when he was observed acting in a suspicious nature after leaving a store. Burton was arrested in Norfolk through the cooperative efforts of police of that city and Virginia Beach. No details have been released as yet concerning the arrest of the juvenile.

All of the suspects have been charged with attempted murder and armed robbery.

Pace received minor gunshot wounds of two fingers during an exchange of gunfire with two men who robbed the store and fled on foot.

Extradition proceedings are underway to return Jordan to Virginia Beach for legal proceedings.

The stranded dog, hearing Major's barking, turned and swam towards Major. Both dogs reached Ball at the same time and were brought ashore.

Residents who had assembled on the banks gathered rags to dry and warm Major and the rescued stray.

Ball and Major returned to the warmth of the patrol car and resumed their patrol to await the next call for assistance.

Parents To Visit School

Open House will be held tonight from 7:30 to 8:45 p.m. for parents of Kellam High School students.

There will be a short introductory program in the auditorium, but parents will not follow a regular bell schedule. They will be at liberty to visit each department as they like. Members of the Junior Civitan club will serve as guides.

There will be continuous band and chorus concerts in the auditorium. In the art room there will be demonstrations of the pottery wheel, silk screen painting, and an exhibit of student work.

Other departments will conduct regular class programs. "This will give parents an opportunity to see school in action and chat with teacher," said Miss Shirley Rountree, assistant principal.

According to Principal Jeff Davis, the purpose of open house is to bring students, teachers, and parents together for a greater understanding of curriculum offerings at Kellam.

Organizational Meeting Sunday

An organizational meeting of the Kempville Pony/Colt Baseball League for the 1971 season, will be held Sunday at the Kempville High School cafeteria at 4 p.m.

Parents of boys age 13-16 residing in the Kempville area and any other interested persons are urged to attend.

are presently served on a volunteer basis.

Those Fire Council members who were in attendance at this meeting, with two exceptions, agreed to the necessity of appointing a full time paid Drill Master to supervise training programs.

All those present at this meeting, with the exception of one, each apparently voicing the opinion of members of their individual departments, agreed that the person selected as a city-wide Fire Chief should be chosen from within the city of Virginia Beach.

The excepted department felt that the selection should be based primarily on an individual's qualifications and not necessarily restricted to the city.

Plans call for the Fire Council members to finalize their selection of three nominees for the office of Fire Chief at their next regularly scheduled meeting of March 8th.

While these recommendations will be submitted to City Manager Scott immediately, no definite word has been released as to when the Fire Chief will be named.

Morale Is Low among City Employees

Virginia Beach City Employees have no civil service protection, or any union.

We can be fired without cause, on any excuse. We have no tenure, no seniority, no security, no VEAC job protection.

Last Week Councilman Waterfield Said:

I am very much concerned with the morale of the City Employees and of the action of some of the administrative people within our City.

In the last several months, we have seen local people replaced by people who have always lived outside of our City. What I am saying to the council should be applied in general terms and not applied to any specific case, but as a councilman I feel that Virginia Beach has people as well qualified to fill these positions as anyone, and that before someone outside of the City is employed, we should be sure that we have thoroughly examined all of the local applicants and that we have exhausted the supply of local applicants before considering anyone from outside the City.

We as councilmen are elected by the people of the City of Virginia Beach, and responsible to them. We have employees, and I want to wherever I can support those who are in administrative positions and I shall not interfere in their administrative prerogatives unless I am of the opinion that they have not properly handled the case. The City Manager is a chief administrative officer of this City, and I agree that he should be the one to handle these matters, but he is employed by the council and we are elected by the people and in every case the people should be supreme and while it is my desire to uphold the administrative officials hands, I shall also reserve the rights to oppose them or their decisions if in my opinion their decision has not been proper.

Beach To Host POW Meeting

The City of Virginia Beach, along with the Chamber of Commerce, will act as host, and sponsor respectively, for a May conference on the prisoner of war problem.

The conference, which should draw mayors of cities from Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina, will be a week-end affair of working sessions.

Although no definite commitments have been received, speakers for the sessions may include a repatriated prisoner of the Vietnam War, Virginia Beach Mayor Donald H. Rhodes, and several others who are aware and informed on the problem.

Mrs. Naomi Bellisle, wife of a Navy Lieutenant commander stationed at Oceana Naval Air Station, said the idea started when it became apparent the North Vietnamese delegation was receptive to a "people's program."

She pointed to mayoral delegations who've been successful in talking with the North Vietnamese in Paris and said that more ventures of that type should be carried out.

Hopefully the conference will be a place where mayors or their representatives can be informed about the best methods to use for reaching the North Vietnamese, she said.

"Besides writing letters and making phone calls, we need to get the word about the situation and the missing in action program."

"We have men not only in the North Vietnamese prisoner of war camps but also men held by the Viet Cong in South Vietnam," she said.

The men held captive by the Viet Cong are not part of the talks help with the North Vietnamese and are often forgotten in the negotiations stage.

"We want to reach these people as well," she said.

If the conference is successful in a four-state area, then other surrounding states may see the value of the program and begin one of their own, Mrs. Bellisle said.

"We cannot let this become a dead issue," she said.

As information becomes available on the program, of which she was the originator, it will be passed on to other interested parties, she added.

Housewife's Friend City's Troubleshooter

By James Turner

Last month a woman called the Consumer Protection Bureau with a complaint. Her husband's undershorts were turning red when she washed them because of his deodorant. What could be done?

Nothing locally, Consumer Protection Chief Robert L. Lohr told her, but his bureau would contact a national representative of the company, and try to resolve the problem in that manner.

"A lot of the problems we get are like that," Lohr said, "and we have to turn them over to larger agencies for action."

In this case, it was the Food and Drug Administration that finally got the complaint, because the deodorant was causing a chemical change producing a dye.

"These type complaints are funny to us, because it's never happened to us," he said, "but we can understand that woman's anger at the company."

Lohr said other incidents of a far more serious nature

Campaign Revised

The City of Virginia Beach has released its revised advertising and promotion schedule for the forthcoming tourist season.

Some $136,000 will be spent between now and June 30 to promote the resort as the place to visit this summer.

Included in the advertising schedule are 216 advertisements in 30 newspapers, 6 advertisements in consumer magazines, and a market test for a radio and a television advertising campaign. In addition, there are billboards, brochures and other promotional programs.

Frank Cressy, the city's public information officer, says the new schedule should produce an excellent overall advertising program and one the city hopes will produce another record year of visitors.

Preliminary reports from resorts to the south of Virginia Beach indicate this may be no easy task. Miami and other resorts in Florida, as well as the Georgia Coast, are already reporting a decline in tourist business. Some resorts are off as much as 10 to 12 percent compared with last year and innkeepers in Miami Beach say that the tourists are "waiting their pocketbooks" this season.

The new schedule is designed for maximum exposure in such key markets as New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, the Baltimore and Washington area and parts of Canada. The total circulation of the 30 papers involved is in excess of 14.5 million and the magazine circulation is over 4.3 million. The total cost of newspaper and magazine advertising is just over $85,000.

Cressy pointed out that this year's advertising program includes Cincinnati, Ohio as a test market for a 3-week radio campaign from March 14 to April 3. The campaign includes an all-expense vacation for two at the resort city. The lucky couple will be selected from among those responding to the radio spots. The campaign includes 36 spots at a cost of $1,698.

The Washington, D. C. area has been selected for a television test market during the 4-week period between March 14 and April 10. One-minute ads will be programmed during the Dick Van Dyke Show, "The Dick Van Dyke Show," and "The Tonight Show." The television test will cost approximately $7,480.

Cressy said, "We don't know how a concentrated radio schedule or television ads will work, but we feel it's worth trying." He added that "This test market will give us an indication of whether we should expand our broadcast or curtail it."

The newspaper campaign will feature three basic ads of 200 and 300 lines each. The theme for the ads is "One more day is wonderful" and spotlights a young couple walking among sea oats along the beach. It contains a cut coupon which is to be mailed to the Chamber of Commerce for promotional brochures and any other information they may wish.

Cressy also pointed out that seven promotional brochures previously used by the city are being revised and consolidated into three or possibly four folders. One will be a general promotion of the city's attractions and features, another an accommodations listing and the third feature of outdoor recreational opportunities with emphasis on fishing and hunting. Cressy said the city would like to develop the image of being the "bill-fish capital of the East Coast."

In addition to the resort promotion, the city will spend approximately $12,000 promoting industrial development. The theme for industrial ads is "Make your living where it's worth living."

Largest Heroin Find Reported

The Virginia Beach Narcotics Squad Tuesday night uncovered the largest quantity of heroin ever found here in any one single drug investigation.

Authorities say they confiscated two ounces of uncut heroin, which reportedly would bring from $3,500 to $5,000 in illegal street sales, at Shore Drive and Great Neck Road. A small quantity of marijuana was also found.

Police said they have charged Phillip Carana, 23, stationed at the U. S. Navy Destroyer-Submarine Pier in Norfolk, with possession of heroin and possession of marijuana.

Southern Portion Affected

Transportation Plan Unveiled

By James Turner

A new master plan for the city's transportation system was unveiled Wednesday afternoon by the Planning Department, showing a major emphasis for development of a roadway system in the southern portion of Virginia Beach.

The proposed revisions which will be presented to the Planning Commission at its March 9 meeting, is an update of the Master Transportation Plan drawn for the city in 1965 by Wilbur Smith Associates. The plan, which took several months to develop, contains no cost estimates for completion, said Planning Director Charles C. Carrington.

Carrington said the plan has been redrawn because of the "tremendous growth in the Southern portion of the city" in an effort to make it more flexible and viable to compensate for the growth factor. "There is nothing earth-shaking in it," Carrington said, "but we think we should go ahead and work on it now to keep pace and to avoid being hurt at a later date."

Lee Hickman, staff planner, said the major roadways to be altered include the proposed Independence Blvd. extension, Princess Anne Road and the North-South collector system along London Bridge Road.

Independence Blvd. would continue East until it reached the proposed Green Run development, then would swing South through Green Run and turn West and hook up with the Chesapeake loop system.

Hickman said Princess Anne Road would continue East to Sandbridge on its present proposed path, then hook in with a proposed roadway that will cut through the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge and continue South to the North Carolina line.

Carrington said the present Back Bay plan includes a roadway that would go into the refuge and terminate.

"That's fine and it does what it's intended to, protect the integrity of the park," he said. "But without access through Back Bay we would need a causeway" to reach the False Cape area.

"I won't go into the effects of a causeway on Back Bay but the cost would be staggering," Carrington said.

Draft Move Brings Action

Virginia Beach City Council has adopted a resolution opposing the possible move of Virginia Beach Draft Board to Norfolk.

Council members also resolved to contact Selective Service State Director Ernest D. Fears; Congressmen Thomas N. Downing and G. William Whitehurst; and U. S. Senators William B. Spong and Harry F. Byrd, Jr., to seek their aid in retaining the Local Board #100 in Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Page Hartley, Director of Board #100, said she had received a letter last week from Selective Service National Director Dr. Curtis W. Tarr outlining plans for collocating U.S. draft boards.

She said a phone call came later from Fears during which he "greatly indicated to me that the board will be collocated with Norfolk."

Mrs. Hartley said Board chairman Paul N. Sutton, indicated he had been informed by Fears the operation would be moved to Norfolk but the local board would still be permitted to hold their monthly meetings in Virginia Beach. These meetings are for reviewing cases of local registrants, and hearing appeals of registrants seeking some change in their draft classification.

Mrs. Hartley said she understood the move was being made on economic grounds, but she "couldn't understand this attitude." She pointed out that the only expense to the federal government is in clerical salaries and phone service, which will still be a necessity in the Norfolk location. The City of Virginia Beach furnishes a headquarters building for the Board's operation, including all necessary utilities and house-keeping services. "We even mow the lawn," Mayor Donald Rhodes said.

Mrs. Hartley said she also felt a move to Norfolk would increase the cost to the federal government since it would require transporting 400 to 900 cases of files between Norfolk and Virginia Beach each month (Continued on page 3)

Travel Writers May Be Feted

Virginia Beach is expecting to host some of the top travel writers in the United States during the weekend of March 12 as members of the Mid Atlantic Chapter of the Society of American Travel Writers come to town.

Participating in the weekend activities will be travel writers from New York to Florida and as far west as Ohio, according to Scott Sterling, The Beach Innkeeper.

Several state officials would also be participating, including the Assistant Executive Director of the Conservation and Economic Development Department, Chris Christopoulos and the Director of the Travel Department.

Tentative plans for the weekend, as outlined by Sterling, include a dinner Friday night hosted by various individual members of the Restaurant Association. Saturday's schedule includes golf, tennis, tours of the Cayce Foundation and residential areas and other activities, featuring a beach buggy trip to Barbers Hill where lunch will be served.

Saturday evening will feature an open house and cocktails preceding dinner at the White Heron, where they will hear the Ambassador to the United States from Greece, followed by an evening of entertainment at Rogers Gallery. The group will depart on Sunday.

Dome May Be Permanent Home to Arts and Crafts

The Virginia Beach Development Council is exploring the possibility of establishing a permanent Arts and Crafts Center in the resort city, and is considering the Alan B. Shepard Civic Center for its location.

Scott Sterling, in a report to the council, recommended that the civic center be converted into a home for arts and crafts across the entire state of Virginia.

He said, "with some 167 crafts now existing in the state, plus the many cultural activities in Virginia Beach, it is only logical that such a center be established and that it be located here."

Sterling went on to point out that Williamsburg now supports the largest handicraft program in the United States with a staff of about 80 people involved in 30 different crafts.

Sterling said such a center in Virginia Beach could bring together all 167 crafts plus the cultural events and expose them to more than 25 million persons who either vacation in the city or visit for a day or night.

The craftsmen would establish booths within the civic center where their crafts would be on permanent displays as well as for sale. As outlined by Sterling, the civic center could either lease space to the craftsmen or receive commissions on the sales, or a combination of the two.

And to carry the project further, Sterling proposed the formation of an Arts and Crafts Commission which would be entitled to matching funds from the federal government. He pointed out that the city council now appropriates approximately $85,000 a year for the operation of the civic center and with matching funds this would mean an operational budget of some $170,000 annually. The city decided last October that it would no longer sponsor activities at the Civic Center. The decision came after several major attractions failed to draw sufficient attendance to merit the program. The Dome is now operated on a rental basis only with rent ranging from as low as $125 a day to $500 a performance.

James Mathias, who supervises the operation of the facility, favors the proposed arts and crafts center "but not at this time." He points out that the facility has already been rented many days through December and would mean some contracts would have to be broken.

Sam Scott, who has resigned his position as Director of Tourism Development for the city, says there is a definite need for a feasibility study to determine just what can be done with the Civic Center.

There is a proposed $10,000 for such a study in the budget which is now being reviewed by the City Manager, Scott said the proposal for establishing the arts and crafts center could be a part of that study.

Richard Kline, a member of the Development Council, said, "If things can be worked out and we can get the federal funds, I think it would be a great thing for the city. If it will promote tourism, I would be very much in favor of it."

The committee was instructed to further investigate the possibility of such a move.

It Was A Show-Stopper

Fire heavily damaged the Windmill Restaurant on Virginia Beach Boulevard late Monday afternoon moments before go-go dancers arrived to "do their thing". Officials said the blaze began in the kitchen during preparations for the evening meal. All restaurant personnel escaped to safety. No estimates have yet been made on the extent of damage.

Members Art Was Tops

The Virginia Beach Art Association's Members Show held at the Civic Center last week was one of the best, if not the best, ever held by the group. The quality of the work was far superior as a whole to most of the past shows.

Guest artist Barclay Sheeks nearly overshadowed the rest of the 200 some odd entries with his special exhibit of acrylic paintings. The sectional painting "Tidewater Winter", depicting a snow-custed marshlands on a freezing day, is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful pieces of work exhibited locally. Of course, one has come to expect perfection of this artist.

There were many other Tidewater artists who exhibited quite competitively with Sheeks, among them the familiar Herb Jones, Edward Carson, Bill Credle, Vance Mitchell, Ed. Roubuck. It is inconceivable that any of these artists could ever display poor work. They were all, of course, award winners in the Thursday judging.

Jones' "Study in Shadows No. 2", a watercolor, was a most deserving Best-in-Show winner. Four other winners were particular favorites—Carson's "Sneakers on the Rail", first place in oils and acrylics, and Bill Credle's "Hitchhiker", honorable mention in the same category; the top graphics winner, "Autumn's Last Leaves", a truly memorable study of an elderly rural couple; and Bernard Drexler's honorable mention in the sculpture category, "May 1970", copper tubing stick figures of campus violence.

The complete list of winners includes: oils and acrylics: "Fes Man", Robin Partin, and "Rhythms", Harriet Goldberg, honorable mention. Mixed media: first place, "Life", Vance Mitchell; second place, "Bisafra", Mark Faverman; and honorable mention, "Roman Rules Toledo", Helen Singleton. Watercolor: first place, "Landscape", Carol Debot; second place, "Neighbors", Skippy Anderson; and honorable mention, "Spring Window", Libby Bennett. Graphics: second place, "Sam Jones from Petersburg", Carson; and honorable mention, "Running from the Rain", Stephens Hobbs. Sculpture: first place, "Where Have All The Flowers Gone", George Laakso; and second place, "Lot's Wife", Elliot Bernstein.

The judges were undoubtedly faced with a dilemma in picking the winners. The entries offered some very challenging pieces of art.

Among those that caught this reviewer's eye (and it almost seems a shame to mention such a limited list) were: Jones' study in watercolor of an old church, "Old Time Religion"; Jan Langmann's sensitive oil "Tomorrow's Child"; Adele Tignor's acrylic "Pears"; an offbeat still life; Joan Wellings' oil "Daisies"; James Ferrell's exceptionally detailed watercolor "Hurricane Watch"; Lee Leach's unusual chain sculpture "Bandit"; Frances P. Tenney's graphic study of the "Masthead"; Burton Mullins' unique marquet "Old Cape Henry Light"; Nancy Warren's colorful "Poppies"; Betty Crawford's unusual mixed piece "Excavation Site 123"; Andrea Patterson's lovely oil "Poppies"; Drexler's thought-provoking sculpture—again in copper tubing stick figures—"Enter Here"; and Wah MacLeod's seascape in oil "Breakers by Moonlight".

It was an outstanding show. The perfect vehicle for this area's talented artists.

'Salesman' Sells VBLT as Courageous Group

It's almost as if playwright Arthur Miller had known Phil Uhler that day in 1949 when he created the pitiful and tragic character of Willy Loman.

Chances are, he didn't know Uhler. But the image conjured up in Miller's mind of Willy Loman probably bore an uncanny likeness to the stoop-shouldered and distraught little character that Uhler presents in the "Death of a Salesman."

It is primarily because of Uhler's awesome performance that "The Salesman" reaches heights seldom scaled by local production companies. And, with Uhler's dynamic portrayal of the emotionally scarred salesman comes the Virginia Beach Little Theatre's most outstanding production in a season that hasn't known average performances.

However, it would be more than unfair to credit Uhler solely for the overwhelming success of "The Salesman." He must share that credit with Vi Ragan, who performs masterfully in the role of the wife who sometimes suits out the truth to maintain her image of Willy, and Pete Scoppa, Willy's brother who represents a symbol of success to a man who knows no success.

Miller's poignant story of a man who wants desperately for his son to be successful—and forgiving—comes alive in the VBLT. The audience is shown the fiction between Willy and his oldest son, Biff (Nick Bole), and then taken to the past via a flashback to see the reason a hotel room affair involving Willy and a buyer for one of his clients.

After Biff surprises his father and the woman in the hotel room, the relationship between father and son plummets. Biff never forgives his father for what he has done to his mother. Coupled with Willy's massive guilt complex, the relationship is beyond repair and their presence merely brings out the worst in both.

Mike Bole turns in an interesting performance as the no-madec eldest son whose shattered faith in his father puts him on a free-wheeling course and prohibits him from establishing himself.

Bill Hawkins is Happy, the youngest son who blocks out the pressures at home and spends much of his time seducing wives of business executives. Hawkins is perhaps the weakest link. His performance is lethargic and littered with pretentious gestures.

One of the cast's better performances is by Dirk Van Allen who portrays Charley, the blase and sometimes humorous

"guy next door" who bears the brunt of Willy's frequent emotional outbursts. Ultimately, however, Charley is there to befriend Willy when he loses his sales job with the company after 34 years. He loans Willy enough money for his insurance premium—a movie which paves the way for the play's tragic and emotional ending.

Perhaps the single most powerful scene is the one in which Willy and his young boss, Howard Wagner (Foy Shaw), meet in a confrontation which results in the loss of Willy's job. Uhler's portrayal is complete as the man whose world has crashed down around him. Miller's lines receive maximum mileage from Uhler's trembling, fearful and desperate presentation.

Good performances were logged by supporting members Fran Peterson, Gerry Dennis, Lynn Adams, Alan Barber, Jane Scoppa and Linda Peterson.

Exact technical work in production, sound and lighting heightened the continuity of the presentation. Particularly effective was the use of a chilling blue spotlight during flashbacks.

But, perhaps most of the credit should go to everyone associated with the VBLT and not just the members of the cast and crew of "The Salesman." Of particular significance is the Little Theatre's bold choices of plays. The VBLT hasn't become a cliché like many of its counterparts. It seems to select plays for subject matter and not merely for their acceptability in the supper club circuit.

Bravo "Death of a Salesman." But, equally as important, bravo Howard.

THE VOICE OF VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA

Musician Appointed

Adcock
James P. Sadler, president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, has announced the appointment of Thomas W. Adcock to the position of assistant to the Chamber's executive vice-president Albin R. Malibes.

Adcock commanded the Armed Forces School of Music located on the Naval Amphibious Base at Little Creek before his recent retirement from the Navy. He and his family have resided in Virginia Beach for the past six years during his assignment at the School of Music, first as executive officer and later as commander.

"Having worked closely with the Chamber on committees and in ventures of joint interest to the Navy and this community, Adcock is no stranger to our members or Tidewater residents," Sadler noted in making of "Who's Who in the South and Southwest" and well known among both professional musicians and music educators. Adcock was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal on the occasion of his retirement for his "superb performance of duty" and "distinguished achievements."

Playboy Director In Show

Green
Robert Green will do the commentary for the menswear being modeled in "Fashions For Heart's Sake", a benefit style show February 27 at the Virginia Beach Civic Center. The men's clothes being shown are from the Hub, women's fashions from La Vogue, both of Military Circle.

Green, Playboy Fashion Director, scouts the men's fashion centers of the world, for the most newsworthy, tasteful and Playboy-oriented menswear. New York, London, Paris and Rome are his beat. On a first-name basis with such greats as Hardy Amies, Pierre Cardin, Valentino and Bill Blass, he is a recognized power who could assist greatly in establishing a look or a line if he likes it. Green is contributing his participation in the fund raising event to the Tidewater Heart Association.

The Princess Anne Woman's Club and Virginia Beach Sarcotom Club are sponsoring the fashion show which will be produced and directed by Mildred Alexander.

Commentary for the women's fashions will be Jackie Segaloff, manager of La Vogue.

A cabaret-style set up will be utilized for both the fashion show from 8 to 9:30 and dancing from 9:30 to midnight. Music for both segments will be by Clarke Godfrey's Orchestra.

Tickets will be on sale at the Civic Center and at the door on Saturday night. Admission is $2.50 and all proceeds will go to the Tidewater Heart Association, earmarked for the Cardiovascular Center at Norfolk General and Cardiology Laboratory at Kings Daughters Children's Hospital.

Stockholders View Investment At Party

It was "Show and tell" Friday night at the Harbour Room of the White Heron Motel... Virginia Beach Enterprises was showing improvements to the complex to its stockholders and there was plenty to talk about.

The food table snaked its way around the outer wall of the circular building, laden with such delicacies as a gigantic baked rock fish, numerous decorated hams, roast pheasant, chicken livers wrapped in bacon strips; steamed shrimp gorgonzola and enough roast beef to feed an army.

It was so ornately decorated, with great stuffed lobster and naturally arranged fowl, that the 100 or so guests stood in awe of manager Frederico Connola's culinary talents. They were equally amazed at the uniqueness of a lighted sugar-cube model of the organization's proposed People's Bank.

During the evening they toured the newly decorated Harbour Room, converted from its former use as a private club to a social center for private and business groups; they saw the "unveiling" of the Nautilus Room, formerly the club's patio, now ornately decorated with a New England whaling village decor, complete with lighted lobster pots in the arch of the entrance canopy; and visited the regular motel dining room which has now assumed a new look as the Chart Room.

Overseeing the evening's festivities were Rhea Adams, president of Virginia Beach Enterprises, and Mrs. Frances Derring, general manager of the Club manager Connola and his wife.

White Heron.

The remodeling of the eating and meeting facilities is just the first phase in a $200,000 improvement program. In the second phase the guest accommodations will be refurbished (one was on display in its new look Friday night) and in the final phase the docks will be renovated and a new bayfront swimming pool will be built to replace the one now being filled in.

By the middle of this summer the completed complex will consist of the motel, marina, three restaurants, several meeting and small-convention rooms and a European health spa. The total investment will be more than $1 million.

Officials said that as of Monday they had received no written order regarding the collocation or any firm dated for completion of the move.

But that isn't to say that the Consumer Protection Bureau isn't willing to help. "When you get down to it, isn't the basic function of government to protect the people from fraud and other things that harm them?" Lohr said.

And as far as the limitations on the bureau's area of responsibility, Lohr says there aren't any limits as to where the department can go.

"That's what I like about the job. I've been here for a month, but each problem has been different," Lohr said. And in that month, he said he's come to realize that the department will eventually have to expand. Presently, he has a staff of five.

Sometime in the future, Lohr says he can envision a need for a lawyer to handle prosecution of cases and expanded staff to handle complaints.

Even as Lohr was talking about expansion, he stopped to talk with a woman with a question on an item for sale.

The lady wanted to know if she could sell horse manure for fertilizer by the cubic inch. Lohr said he didn't know what the restrictions, if any, might be but he'd check and get back to her in an hour.

"This is what I mean," he said. "There's always a new question to be answered, always somebody else's problem to be answered."

"But that's what I'm here for, and that's what I like about it."

Funds Could Aid 17 Areas

Two applications totalling $1,782,745 have been filed by the City of Virginia Beach for federal assistance for construction of sewer lines to service 69,244 residents.

The two projects are part of a move by the city to gain available federal funding for 11 areas in need of sewers. Total cost of the two projects is $4,643,766. If funding is received, it will be the first time in 27 years that the federal government has provided financial assistance for such projects.

Areas affected by the first project include Eureka Park, the Thalia area South of Virginia Beach Boulevard, Oceana, Linnier and Chesapeake Colony.

The second project would provide sewer lines for the Thalia area North of the boulevard, Seatack, Baylake Pines, Baylake Beach, Chesapeake Beach, Ocean Park, L.J. Gardens, Forest Lake Estates, Lawson Forest, Bayville Park, Bradford Terrace, and the Bradford Acres areas.

Couple Farm Ambassadors

Today's commercial farmer is a clean-cut, soft-spoken man who drives a $17,000 John Deere tractor rig in cultivating his acreage and seldom lays a hand on a hoe or shovel.

He is a successful businessman. He invests up to $100,000 in equipment alone and probably works harder than the man who invests the same amount in other interests but reaps greater rewards for his efforts.

Norris Shirley of Virginia Beach is the epitome of today's commercial farmer. He farms some 1500 acres of prime land near Princess Anne Court House and produces top quality soybeans, corn and wheat.

He produced so many soybeans per acre last year, in fact, he was named Virginia's Championship Soybean Grower and in this capacity will tour Europe as an agricultural ambassador.

Shirley, along with his wife, Margie, and 73 other American farmers and their wives, will spend two weeks in England, Holland, Germany and Spain promoting the use of soybeans, studying the European market, and doing a bit of public relations between the nations. The trip is being sponsored by Elanco Products Co., manufacturers of herbicides.

The honor did not come to Shirley accidentally. He worked for it. When the Extension Service launched the 50-bushel soybean contest, Shirley picked 25 acres of choice land, with a high fertility level, to cultivate specifically for the contest. The land had been used in the wheat control program; it had twice been sprayed and had been treated with Lasso. And he selected the varieties of beans which had previously given him the best performance.

His yield was 53,308 bushels per acre, the highest yield in the state. The state average is only 24 bushels per acre and the city's average of 27 to 28 bushels falls way below his final yield.

Shirley gave the crop every opportunity to come out a winner but Agriculture Agent Dick Cockrell thinks there might have been another important factor.

"I think the good Lord had a lot to do with it," he said. "It has just been a good year all the way around."

Shirley was not born into farming, as his success might indicate. He already had a years in the business world behind him in 1953 when he decided farming was more to his liking. And he's never been sorry.

"I like the land," he said.

"I like the life, no set schedules to meet, it's a good life." He climbed onto the gigantic tractor and maneuvered it into the shed with the ease of a luxury car. He walked out into the sun and smiled, the smile of a happy man, the smile of a man who will do Virginia Beach—and Virginia and America—proud in Europe next month.

Agriculture Agent Cockrell congratulates Shirley and his wife, Margie, on the winning soybean crop.

Dragway To Open March 7

The Virginia Beach Dragway at Creede will resume a regular Sunday schedule of races starting March 7.

The gates will open at noon. The time trials are scheduled at 1 p.m., followed by races at 3 p.m.

Charlie Mims, one of the top winners on the East Coast, will have his 1961 Dodge, the Invader, on display this Saturday at Thompson-Royal Dodge on Virginia Beach Blvd. He has been driving the same car nearly 10 years and has taken over 100 trophies with it. About 25 of these trophies will also be on display Saturday.

Registration

The Frere Jacques School will be open Saturday to accept fall registrations from junior kindergarten thru ninth grade.

The School offers Montessori and SRA Methods of teaching also French and Ballet as part of the regular curriculum.

To insure placement this fall, early enrollment is advisable. Summer camp and remedial classes in math and english applications will also be accepted at this time.

EDITOR

TO CATCH AN INDUSTRY

By John Griffin

In the first two articles Howard D. Bestre, author of THE PRACTICE OF INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT, discussed the necessity of good schools, good streets and good city government, good retail stores, good recreation facilities and good public buildings, good government, and good things in community which attract industry and which makes it a place where prospective employees will want to live. This week the author looks at the mental attitude of the people. Do the people believe they have these physical factors?

In the final analysis, good community climate is based on the faith people have in their community. A prospective company will first seek information concerning market or raw materials transportation facilities, taxes, labor availability, utilities, a good site at reasonable price or other physical factors, but due to modern transportation facilities and/or technology, industry usually finds that more than one city, area or even state will rate equal or almost equal in these physical or economic qualifications. Therefore, more often than not, the factor of community climate is the one that finally sways the prospect away from one city or state into another.

Certainly, as previously pointed out, community climate has a definite effect on how well your community's physical or economic factors are developed. It is also an important factor in determining industrial location for many reasons. A basic one is due to the emphasis which industry places on the importance of having their employees live in a community in which they will be happy. It is good business to have them satisfied.

The necessity of a good community climate or positive attitudes toward industrial progress must be sold to everyone in a city, state or area. But the community must be sold to everyone in a city, state or area.

But the community must first earn the right before their citizens can be allowed to advertise that they live in the best city, country, or state, or at least in one that is as good as any other one. Community leaders have a responsibility of developing the proper attitude. This can be done in many ways.

Talks before community groups and service clubs are valuable tools for informing the public of progress that is being made in the city. Women's groups should not be overlooked. A good example of the importance of woman in industrial development is illustrated in this example which carries an important lesson.

A newspaper carried an article concerning the visit of a company president and his wife to a community. He was making this trip to finalize plans concerning a branch plant. He spent the day looking over the sites and buildings, meeting with the industrial development committee and doing other necessary work. His wife spent the day shopping, visiting the churches, looking over general living conditions and visiting with people in the city.

The company president returned to his hotel room later in the day convinced that he would put his plant in that community. His wife came back with the report that she didn't like it there and personally wouldn't live in such a place. As a result the plant did not locate in the community. This is just one example of the decision-making role of women in the industrial development of a community but it is an important one.

Off-hand remarks can do irreparable damage to the community and, as a result, to the individual within the community. When citizens criticize their city they are actually criticizing themselves. After all, what is a community but its people? It is people living together which make a community, not artificial boundaries lines drawn by a geographer or the legislature.

An industrial project will often come to a city, ride the taxis and busses and talk with citizens to determine what they think of the community. They will never introduce themselves by saying "I'm thinking of investing a million dollars in this community. What do you think of it?" He will make that determination through casual conversation and eavesdropping on others conversations.

A certain western desert city has developed an attitude whereby when a tourist stops in a service station on a 110 degree summer day and comments about how hot it is, the service station attendant remarks how low the humidity is. Therefore, he says, it isn't as hot as 110 degree temperatures in some other places and it is always cool in the shade and cools off at night. Now this is true community climate. This does mean that citizens should sell a false pride in the community.

There is the story of the vice president of a large company who was talking with some of the industrial relations managers of some of the plants which had recently located within a city. As the man was departing, he overheard a receptionist saying to a salesman "This is the deadiest town in the world. There is absolutely nothing to do." Earlier in the day the vice president had toured the museum, new university field house, city auditorium and other cultural and recreational facilities in the community. The receptionist had witnessed a lack of something that people here age want in recreation. Criticism such as hers, said at a different time and place, may contain something that will also affect the location of industry.

If there is something wrong, admit it. And if it is correctible start the wheels in motion. If disadvantages are not correctible then other advantageous points must be emphasized. If there are faults however, don't be an ostrich, stick your head in the sand and say they don't exist. Do something about them! Then, and only then, can the industrialist be told that you have a good city in which to live.

New industry always brings new people. The community needs to be prepared to accept these people into the community. Next week's article will deal with that topic.

Readers unanimously supported additional council meetings. It is significant that Beach Borough Councilman Robert Callis introduced a resolution to City Council Monday calling for four formal meetings, three at 8 a.m., one at 8 p.m. "I doubt it will start next week," Mayor Rhodes said, "but this will get it off the ground."

Mrs. J. M. Atwood summed up the reader's feelings in her note: "I favor additional meetings, especially at night. This would allow many working people who cannot afford to lose a day's work or pay to participate in watching Council in action. A responsive Council should welcome citizen participation and encouragement should be forthcoming from same."

Another reader commented: "There must be many citizens who would like to attend Council meetings but cannot because of their jobs during the day."

Callis' resolution, which would do away with all closed meetings except those called by council, did not specify night meetings.

In the still strong response to the school bond question, one apparently very knowledgeable reader said: "I voted 'no' for two reasons which must be understood in order to evaluate the response. Reason 1--a yes vote might be interpreted as a mandate to continue the rapid and ill-concerned growth of Virginia Beach, which is the real problem. Reason 2--I don't want to settle for second class schools."

Some readers have indicated the Sun presents only one side of an issue. This is not true. The questions are asked; the responses printed. The questions are never intentionally biased. Admittedly the necessary brevity of the question prohibits a thorough examination of the issue, as in the school question, but they usually follow ample news coverage offering full explanation.

All letters to the editor are printed as space permits providing they are in good taste, to the point and signed. Only three have been "killed" by this editor; one was personally abusive to a city official and two were not signed...one was an excellent letter from a self-proclaimed hippie and his views on Cape Pendleton but unfortunately could not be used.

Now, to lighter matters. The Civic Center has long been a financial burden to the city. City-sponsored entertainment was cancelled some time ago because of lack of public support. It is used now primarily for meetings. It has been proposed that the center would be beneficial as an arts and crafts center, renting booths to craftsmen for display and sale of their wares. Is this the answer?

Students Vote

To the Editor:

Four Bayside High School government classes engaged in a lively and thorough discussion of the question. The students came to general agreement that the question carries with it some considerations that must be understood to explain their vote. Several of the students got together and wrote a letter explaining their feelings. This letter (drafted by Elisabeth Crumpton) is enclosed. In summary their vote is not against schools, but against a too populous Virginia Beach and against schools which do not provide a full range of athletic and recreational activities for students and the community.

The vote of the students: Yes 11, No 65, Undecided 5. The survey questionnaire response is my own and not included with the students. Sincerely, J. E. Weinich

To the Editor:

We as students of government in our discussion of local affairs wish to express an opinion on the question published in the Sun Survey concerning a revote, on an improved bond issue which would be modified to include only those buildings of academic value.

First we feel that the question asked did not provide sufficient information to the public of all the factors involved in voting on the issue. Primarily we refer to the fact that Virginia Beach must decide between quantity and quality. We have arrived at the cross-roads of decision. Either home building must be controlled, or Virginia Beach will be caught up in an endless cycle of building schools to meet the need. Furthermore in order to relieve the increasing burden upon our schools, the people of Virginia Beach must become more aware of the situation affecting their community and become active in their government.

Secondly we are of the opinion that quality education involves physical training as well as mental. Therefore gymnasiums must not be omitted because extra-curricular community sports provide constructive activities and teach the participants the benefits of team work. Thus if there is no place for such activities the community will fail to meet its duty to its citizens. Expense can be controlled in the construction of elementary school gymnasiums by combining them with the school's auditorium. Thus, in conclusion, we hope that our expressed opinion will explain our reasoning in condemning a revote on the bond issue to a second death. We do now want to see Virginia Beach distraught with the problems which perplex all too many other overcrowded cities. Sincerely yours,

Concerned Students of Mr. J. E. Weinich's Government Classes, Bayside High School

Speaks Out

To the Editor:

This week's survey calling for opinions relative to City Council having two additional night formal meetings receives my yes. If other cities of comparable size can hold four meetings why cannot Virginia Beach?

Now may I refer to my letter of last week and also to your two past editorials regarding the apparent dissent among council members and the low morale that now exists among city employees. In my letter I expressed my views regarding this low morale and I still stand more so because since then I have talked to some employees again.

In the past several days there have appeared two news stories in one of the Norfolk papers as to the unhappiness among city employees. In one story City Manager Scott was quoted and in the other City Republic Chairman Jimmie S. Fann. Mr. Scott stated and I quote from the news article: "I don't respond to anonymous calls and letters but if you are asking me about the morale of city employees, morale now is higher than it has been at any time during the six years I have been associated with the city of Virginia Beach." May I ask of Mr. Scott is it due to this high morale that has caused ten valued supervisory employees to seek other fields of endeavor? I think not sir. Mr. Fann gave me the impression from his statements that the advertisement he referred to was not a bona fide one and that there were lots of things here that are going unsaid that we judge mysterious. I would like to believe that Mr. Fann did not mean this at all. Has he talked to any employees about this and can he say that there is not a Virginia Beach Employees Association? May I ask that he investigate this further?

Your front page headline this week states: CITY SEEKS FIRE CHIEF. TO IMPLEMENT STUDY. In picking a new fire chief is Mr. Scott going to continue his past practices of going out of the city to find one?

We have here as the only paid chief (Virginia Beach Borough) Mr. E. M. (Bubba) Bain who is thoroughly qualified to assume this position. He has dedicated his life to public safety and has attended various schools and conferences all over this nation to become more learned in his field. I nominate and endorse Chief Bain for this position.

Thank you Mrs. Phillips for allowing me space in your paper for my views.

Discrimination

To the Editor:

It seems that all the letters to the Editor in last week's issue of the SUN were against another school bond referendum. Even an editorial concerning a SUN survey seemed to show that another would be disfavored.

Does the SUN only print the negative side of the question or did you only make your survey in one section of the city? Most of the people I have talked with about another referendum are either for it or are undecided after having voted against it the first time.

I don't always agree with the council or the Planning Commission, certainly, and I take my slaps at them the same as anyone, but I don't like the idea of the schools having to suffer just because someone wants to "wake up" the council or commission or because someone has some other bone to pick with them. There are other ways to make one's desires known to both groups without using the school system as a scape goat. Everyone should know by now that the council is not going to be forced into doing anything they feel is wrong. The planning commission has slowed its building permits, seemingly, but it is still allowed hundreds of units to be built, and I feel sure they will continue to do so. I would hope that they are fully aware that the city cannot simply stop growing because of the desires of a few who don't seem to care whether their children are properly educated. Possibly they will when in the not too distant future the schools announce that they have "standing room only."

I would suggest to those who oppose a school bond issue that they find themselves another excuse to make their views known to council and help give us a school system that we can be proud of in the years to come.

More Plans

To the Editor:

I think it is time to stop building apartments and townhouses until a plan is worked out whereby these facilities will not be a liability to the city. This is just good planning. Sincerely yours,

Knuckles Need A Rap

City Council, still reeling from the recent barrage of criticism over its closed meeting with the School Board, is chafing again this week from a closed meeting Monday following the formal session.

The purpose, as properly announced by council, concerned a personnel matter. Under the Freedom of Information Act this was justification for a closed session. Issues regarding individuals should, of course, be heard only by council as a protection of the individual's rights.

But the following day an account of this closed meeting was related, via a "source", in the Norfolk newspapers. It stated that City Manager Roger Scott was given a "unanimous vote of confidence in the handling of the city's personnel matters."

The following day a second article appeared based on a statement from Beach Borough Councilman Robert Callis, endorsed by Councilmen Floyd Waterfield and George Ferrell, that the previous account was incorrect and that, no such vote of confidence had been raised.

No news personnel was allowed in the meeting. Even the City's information officer was barred. So who really knows the truth about what went on behind those closed doors? Who had the right to know? Only City Council. Then it's officially up to them as to the release of any information. But it should be released not "leaked out" in an underhanded way.

Newspapers are not to be blamed. They were doing their job and doing it well. After all, he who is guilty cannot cast the first stone. But a number of people have been put in a very bad light because of this. It has, in fact, done no one good, least of all the city employee involved, and certainly it hasn't enhanced the image of the city officials.

There is a time for secrecy. That's why the Freedom of Information Act allows closed sessions on personnel matters--to protect the individual--and on real estate transactions--to protect the dollar investment to the taxpayer. And the public understands this.

But few can understand all the gibberish that has thus far come out of that closed meeting...who did what to whom and why! The exchange of confidences is one thing. The violation of ethics is quite another. Council has only its own knuckles to rap in this.

Their Place Is Here

A 19-year-old Virginia Beach youth was in his first year in college when complications from an earlier injury necessitated withdrawal from school for surgery. He planned to return to college but during his recuperation he received his draft notice.

Mrs. Page Hartley at the Virginia Beach Draft Board was apprised of the situation. With much personal interest she aided the youth and his family in every possible way. When he returned to college she put him in touch with the Draft Board there. At her suggestion he proceeded with his physical and was given a disability rather than a student deferment. She had told him she thought the relief of having a definite draft status would aid him in his studies.

And she was right. Today that youth preparing for a professional career and his studies reflect the peace of mind she hoped for.

It's only one case, and not a very dramatic one, but it is indicative of the service Local Draft Board No. 100 provides the City of Virginia Beach, a service primarily appreciated by our young men and their families and facing the draft is often a traumatic experience, the severing of family ties, the uncertainty of the future, the fear of possible combat. It requires the compassion Mrs. Hartley and her staff show the young draftees.

If the Virginia Beach Draft Board is moved to Norfolk, will such compassion and personal interest for our Virginia Beach boys still be possible? Will they become statistics on a page, lost in the masses, rather than individuals with hopes and fears and apprehensions? Maybe not. But one envisions such a situation. It isn't a pleasant thought.

The local board began serving the old Princess Anne County in 1948, and when the merger came expanded its operations to continue serving the enlarged city. There are some nine thousand files in these offices, representing Virginia Beach men of all ages, some now businessmen with families, some still preparing for their indoctrination. And, yes, some who gave their lives.

There is no economical benefit in this case that we can see, as national officials reason for the collocating of local boards. The only cost to the federal government has been in salaries. The Virginia Beach taxpayer has provided the building, the facilities and the overall upkeep. It has been money well spent.

The city has already petitioned its representatives in Washington for aid in keeping Local Draft Board No. 100 in Virginia Beach. The citizens, too, have a responsibility in this effort. If not in personal interest in their own sons and brothers, then certainly in retaining their tax investment. It is hoped the citizens will rally behind the city officials and make their concern known in letters to the proper authorities.

Job Opportunity Show Coming

This group met recently at the Seatack Community Center to plan the second annual Job Opportunity Show which is to be held at the Dome on April 21st and 22nd. They are (left to right) Jim Mathias, dome manager; Mrs. Barbara McCoy, coordinator of neighborhood development; Mrs. Annie Albritton, supervisor of STOP program, Seatack Community Center; Jim Wilson, City Planning Commission; Russell Rucks, Virginia Employment Commission; Mrs. Rose Washington, community action worker, and Sam Caddy, assistant executive director STOP.

Friday brought a pleasant change from the very cold weather we've had recently and some students at Frank

W. Cox High School decided that the cafeteria was too hot and crowded (We suspect a touch of spring fever).

GARY CARPENTER, TODD JANZ, LYNN SPILLANE and DARREL GLANS had a pow wow and soaked up some Sunshine.

BUDDY BYRD and PHYLLIS ANSELL sat out their lunch time in the fresh air and sunshine.

KEMPSVILLE JUNIOR HI TOURNAMENT WINNERS

Basket Champs

Billy Foster stands only a hair over five feet, but he didn't have any trouble cutting the net from the basketball goal after Saturday's championship round of the Virginia Beach Junior High Basketball Tournament.

Foster, the defensive-minded little floor general for Kempville's Braves, helped engineer a 63-58 victory over Plaza's stubborn Trojans and a city championship for Kempville.

The tournament's Most Valuable Player Award went to Foster's teammate Kevin Smith whose jump shots from the corners ultimately spelled doom for the taller Trojans.

Kempville jumped to a 20-14 edge in the first half before hitting a dry spell and fell behind 29-24 at the half. Plaza's run-and-shoot offense, masterfully put together by guard Kim Brown and Sonny Blackmon, accounted for Plaza's surge.

The Braves proved they could execute the fast-break and tied up the game at 29-29 within 35 seconds of the second half. And, by the end of the third quarter, the Braves held a 44-41 advantage. The lead see-sawed, but two free throws by Anthony Glichrist sailed the game away for Kempville.

Earlier in the tournament, host Bayside routed Virginia Beach Junior High 50-37 for third place.

Kempville was 6-0 in conference standings; 12-0 in overall record.

It was a crucial moment but Braves' KEVIN SMITH came through again with his high jump and took the ball away from Plaza forward BILL SCHOONOVER. The expressions on the faces of BRAD BRINKLEY, Braves, MIKE REDUS and Plaza player who could not be identified and Braves forward CRAIG WILLIAMS show the tension as the play-off neared the end.

BOWARD SWINDLE

Will it, or won't it, the players seem to ask themselves as they wait for Brave center RICKY BLIESE's basket shot. He is surrounded by Plaza players KIM BROWN, BOB FOLSOM, BILL SCHOONOVER and BOB CARTER.

Plaza guard MIKE REDUS (20) stretches for the ball but the scrappy forward from Kempville, KEVIN SMITH, reaches a little bit farther.

Mrs. Conkle

Deborah Terrell weds Jack Conkle

Miss Deborah Ruth Terrell became the bride of Jack Wayne Conkle Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. at First Colonial Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Terrell. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wayne Conkle.

The Rev. George T. Stallings officiated. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, King Arms Apartments.

The couple will live at King's Arms Apt., following a honeymoon to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras.

The maid of honor was Miss Shirley Sue Hardison. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Edward Stephen Hart, Miss Jonie Gale Terrell, sister of the bride, Miss Deborah Kay Sheeley, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Caroline Fitzgerald.

The best man was Dwight Thomas Terrell, brother of the bride.

Miss Phillips

Miss Phillips engaged to Edwin Kellam, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gibson Phillips of Norfolk announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Constance Starr Phillips, to Edwin Clay Kellam, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Clay Kellam, of Norfolk.

A late July wedding is planned. Miss Phillips is a graduate of Maury High School and St. Andrews College, where she received a B.A. degree. She is presently a member of the faculty of Eastern Academy.

Miss Phillips is the granddaughter of Mr. Roy Franklin Phillips of Norfolk and the late Mrs. Phillips, and of Mrs. William Emile Cullifer of Roxobel, N. C., and the late Mr. Cullifer.

Mr. Kellam is a graduate of St. Christopher's School in Richmond, and the College of William and Mary, where he received a B. A. degree. He is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity. Mr. Kellam is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Able E. Kellam of Princess Anne County, and of Richard Clement Owen of Norfolk and the late Mr. Owen.

The wedding will take place June 12 at the Prince Lutheran Church in Pittsburgh.

"Hello there," says Mrs. Sam Mason, hostess, to guests in the Chinese room, as Mrs. J. L. Strole, Jr. prepares to sample an Oriental hors d'oeuvre at the progressive party.

Madame president

Former Air Force nurse heads winning auxiliary

Mrs. Louis Lucente looks over her Franklin mint collection

"Those were the days of the shakey C-47s," she recalls. As a flight nurse, she chalked up 1,500 flying hours while stationed with the Air Force in Texas and Illinois.

It was during the Korean War, when she was at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio, that she flew with the wounded to military hospitals throughout the country.

"It gave you a good feeling knowing you were helping these boys," she says.

In one instance, she flew with wounded Cubans, back to Bogota.

"It was such a thrill flying over the Andes Mountains," she says. "The greenery on top of those high peaks was amazing."

This was a long way from her hometown of Shenandoah, Pa. (named for the Virginia valley, because of a similarity in terrain) for the flight nurse, one of six children of Polish parents.

She was to have further unforgettable experiences when she asked for assignment to Alaska, and was stationed two years at Ladd Air Force Base, Fairbanks.

"It was wonderful there, we were all like a family," she says.

But it was three days after arrival there, before she could sleep. "This was June and of course there was perpetual daylight. It wasn't until I blacked out the windows in the dormitory that I finally went to sleep."

And it was there that she was married. Her husband, Lou, was with the 449th Fighter Interceptor Squadron. They were married in the base chapel.

"I'd have to say that since I've been married I've had my greatest years of fulfillment," she says, and this applies even to cooking her husband's favorite Italian lasagna instead of the Polish dishes, which were part of her childhood.

There are four Lucente children now: James, 15, a student at Barry Robinson School; Vickie, 13, at Bayside Junior High School; Tom, 12, and Joseph, 8, who attend Pembroke Meadows.

When the Lucentes moved from Tranterwood Farms to Pembroke Meadows, they added a special room to the house, hopefully soundproof, where their musical children can make all the noise they want.

While the family occupies much of Bernice's time, she does pursue her favorite hobby of coin collecting.

"My father got me interested in it," she says. "About two years ago, I started a Franklin mint collection."

That's the collection, begun in this country in 1776, that features each year an event of historical importance. It will be complete in 1976, its 200th anniversary.

Bernice says she's not a club woman; her only office aside from the auxiliary is that of vice president of Pembroke Meadows PTA. She's a prolific seamstress--will soon make draperies for her living room.

The family lived in Garden City, Long Island, before they came to the Beach, where Lou is now a vice president of Terry Corp.

How about it--does she ever miss the glamor and sophistication of New York?

"Never," she replies in her soft voice. "It's great to visit there--but it's no place to live."

Whenever we run across surplus material at building sites, we salvage it and give it to the Boy Scouts, Camp Civitan, schools, or others who need it."

And about those building sites. There's an element of danger there to children who play in the equipment, or, in some cases, who vandalize it. So the auxiliary shows film in the schools explaining the dangers involved.

They've conducted job fairs in the schools, encouraging students to come into the building industry.

On their list of charities is the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Clinic, and the Tidewater Rehabilitation Institute. They've donated necessities to those in the Seateck area, and worked in the clean-up project there.

All of which appeals highly to Bernice, who has spent many years in service to others.

A graduate of Georgetown University Nursing School, she signed up with the Air Force in 1949.

And this was not a one-shot gesture--the auxiliary continues to look after their needs.

And according to Bernice Lucente the women have turned into regular scavengers.

Spray roses now

At a recent meeting of the Point O'Woods Garden Club, members were reminded that now is the time to set up a schedule for the planting, pruning, and spraying of roses.

Robert Mathews, of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens, gave the women a schedule for insect and fungus control of their plants.

A regular schedule should be set up every seven to ten days, he said.

Early Spring or in the Fall is the time to plant roses. Old plants should be pruned in the Spring, he added.

Brittany Estates Garden Club judged flower arrangements. The theme was "Hearts and Flowers."

Mrs. Hickox won three blue ribbons, one red and one white. Mrs. D. W. Hickman was awarded two white ribbons.

Capt. Bernice Lucente, flight nurse, tends Korean wounded en route to military hospitals in 1951.

Eloise Franco to read "Little Stories"

The 22nd Street Branch of the Virginia Beach Public Library system will present Eloise Franco at a special children's story hour, Feb. 27, at 10 a.m.

The author's deep love of children and understanding of humanity finds expression in her book. The eleven short stories are an unforgettable reading experience.

Children of all ages are invited to attend this special program.

Senior Citizens organize

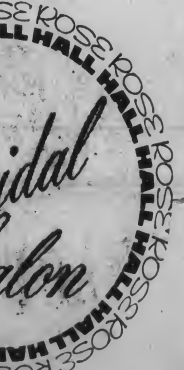

More than 100 senior citizens attended a recent meeting at St. Nicholas Church, to discuss plans for an organization and an activities center in Virginia Beach.

In describing the services and activities now being offered at the downtown Norfolk senior citizens center, Miss Linda May, a counselor at the center, gave the audience a forecast of what could be planned for a similar program in Virginia Beach. Among them were classes in oil painting, ceramics, and more.

GS Troop 126

Valentine's Day was considerably brightened for patients of Virginia Beach Annex Hospital, when members of Girl Scout Troop 126 brought them gayly decorated card holders and baskets filled with Valentine's candy.

Tammy Talbert, Margaret Fuqua and Tammy Birchhead delivered the tray favors to the hospital.

Are your days hectic and too involved? Sometimes we manage to get involved in so many activities that the demands on our time and energy leaves us somewhat pushed and depleted. Stop to take inventory.

First of all, "Be still!" and seek to become aware of the in-dwelling presence of God. Once you do, you will immediately find yourself relieved from a great deal of stress and strain.

Seek guidance in choosing only essentials toward which to direct your attention and energy. Put first things first, thus eliminating the trivial.

As children of God, created with the nature of our parent, it is important to use our time, energy and efforts wisely and creatively. Then our life will show forth great accomplishments through our harmony and efficiency.

DIVINE ORDER IS ESTABLISHED IN MY LIFE AND AFFAIRS AND I WORK WITH THE EFFORTLESS EASE OF SPIRIT.

Richmonders Held In Largest Drug Haul Evangelist

Two Richmond residents are scheduled to return to Virginia Beach Municipal Court next month to face felony charges resulting in the discovery of one of the largest quantities of illegal drugs ever found in the resort city.

Authorities said James G. Sadowski, 22, of Hermitage Road, and Allen B. Mackey, 22, of Galway Road, have been charged with possession of LSD and depressant drugs with intent to sell.

Officials said the suspects were arrested Thursday night when an investigation lead to a quantity of drugs, reportedly representing a "street sale" value of $5,520, in an auto occupied by them on a Witchduck Road parking lot.

Authorities said the drugs would have supplied 1500 "hits" of barbiturates and 130 "hits" of LSD for drug users. This is the largest amount to these types of drugs ever uncovered in Virginia Beach.

The drugs recovered were identified as miltown, librium, donnalol, flornal, phenobarbital, amytal, amobarbital, LSD, Phenaphin, darvon, liquid thorazine, and a pint bottle of seconal.

During a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court last Friday court proceedings were continued until March 19th.

Sadowski was placed under $10,000 bond while bond for Mackey was set at $2,500.

Officials said Sadowski is in custody at the City Jail on a hold order from a Virginia Beach probation officer, and Mackey released under bond.

These drugs, representing the biggest haul of its kind ever found in Virginia Beach, have been evaluated at over $5,000.

In Services

The internationally known evangelist, Cliff Brannon, of Longview, Texas will begin revival meetings at First Colonial Baptist Church, 929 First Colonial Road, Virginia Beach, Sunday at 11 a.m. Services will continue nightly at 7:30 p.m. through March 7th.

Accompanying Rev. Brannon, will be his wife, Ruth, who has given her testimony in over 17 states and three foreign countries.

The Evangelist formerly a practicing attorney is the arranger and publisher of the "Soul Winner's New Testament" that has become so popular in the United States and Foreign Countries.

Class Delves Into Many Social Problems

Over in Room One, John Cregar was having to improvise. His class was to have heard a white college professor from Norfolk State College speak in support of black power. But, unfortunately, the professor had suffered an ulcer attack earlier in the day and couldn't make it.

So Cregar nimbly switched the conversation to another timely problem, runaway children. In only a few moments, his class—ranging from a middle-aged woman to a teen-aged girl—had become engaged in parental pressures, family communications and homes for runaways. Last week, the class heard from a conscientious objector.

Cregar's class, appropriately called "Salt of the Earth," is one of nine seminar-type courses taught once a week at the St. Nicholas Education Center at 644 Little Neck Road.

The curriculum ranges from Cregar's class, which deals with social problems, to "Psychology of the Adolescent" and "God-Talk: 1971" to Dynamics of Counseling and "Family Life Enrichment."

Sister Marguerite who, along with Sister Mary Joan, coordinates the adult education classes, is enthusiastic about the response. When the program began two years ago, it had 210 students. This year, nearly 400 men, women and teenagers from several faiths attend classes. "We try to make people aware of the problems," Sister Marguerite said, "then urge them to do something about them." Instructors include priests and clergymen, two Catholic sisters and laymen. "Our speakers are people proficient in particular fields," she said.

There are two semesters per year with each semester running eight weeks. Registration is $2 and textbooks are bought by the students. Classes are open to all adults and high school juniors and seniors.

Columnist Will Speak at Forum

Bob Considine, one of the world's most popular newspaper columnists, comes to Virginia Beach to speak in the second of a series of Virginia Beach Forum programs, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Rotary Club. Considine will appear at Princess Anne High School at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 4.

Readers of more than 250 newspapers in this country and abroad enjoy Bob Considine's syndicated column, "On the Line." Radio listeners heard his ABC network program, "On the Line with Bob Considine," and can now hear him over NBC Monitor twice each Saturday and Sunday.

Many qualified people regard Bob Considine as today's greatest living reporter. His stamina while working on a story and his ability to turn prodigious amounts of prize-winning copy under pressure are legendary among newsmen. "I wouldn't exchange jobs with any titan or tycoon in the land," he has said. "Gathering, phrasing and dispensing news and ideas is the world's most enchanting job."

In a profile shortly after his new column had made the journalistic world sit up and take notice, Newsweek Magazine hailed his writing as "hard-hitting prose..." and said "his humorous pieces often pack a wallop." Of Considine himself, Newsweek was even more enthusiastic. "No ivory-tower columnist..." they said. "Considine has done much to fill the gap left by Damon Runyan's death."

Tickets for the Considine appearance are on sale to the public at $2.50. Tickets may be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce office or from Rotary Club members.

Marr Is Excused

Federal Judge Robert T. Merhige has declined to sentence Virginia Beach City Sgt. John E. Marr on a citation for contempt of court.

Merhige cited Marr for contempt in Richmond's U. S. District Court Dec. 22 following his failure to appear in Court on Dec. 8 in legal action brought by the American Civil Liberties Union regarding allegations that Marr was operating the City Jail on a segregated basis.

During the Dec. 22 hearing Marr indicated he had integrated the jail except in sleeping quarters. He was ordered to correct this situation, and Marr said he promptly complied.

considerations, like the Blue Ridge Parkway.

For some time North Carolina has shown interest in linking its loop system to a roadway at the southernmost end of Virginia Beach, he said. The roadway's construction would complete that traffic pattern.

Hickman said the new system would allow complete movement throughout the entire city. The old plan gave more movement to the upper half of Virginia Beach.

This plan, if approved by City Council, would give improved movement within Virginia Beach and access to Chesapeake and Norfolk.

Hickman said the plan has been reviewed by the Southeastern Virginia Regional Registering

The Bow Creek Presbyterian Church Weekday Kindergarten for five-year olds, located at Rosemont Road and S. Plaza Trail, will begin registration for the 1971-72 session on March 1.

The Kindergarten office will be open from 9:30 A.M.-12:00 noon, Monday through Friday for those wishing to register their children.

Tuition will remain at $25.00 per month (September-May) and the registration fee will be $5.00. Children must be five years of age by October 1, 1971. Birth certificates will be required.

Planning Commission, the City's Planning Commission, and the City of Chesapeake. Carrington said that City Council was given a briefing on the changes in a closed meeting.

"All we're doing is establishing origins and destinations for the system," Hickman said. "Although we have the basic concept, it's still flexible."
